

Busy Housewives Cheerfully Give Woman Power Data

By JANE NOLAND.

Expecting the groceries or the coal man or "Junior, is that you?" Atlanta housewives stopped in the middle of whatever they were doing, and, a little embarrassed at being caught with their hair mussed, opened their doors to their air raid wardens yesterday as the War Department's woman-power survey got under way.

Out in the Whiteford-Moreland avenue district, an area of small homey bungalows that bears the official OCD title of "Precinct D-4, Zone 5," Mrs. E. W. Van Houten, precinct warden, made the rounds.

When the Constitution reporter and photographer caught up with her, she was walking energetically up Whiteford avenue, despite the sizzling sun, accompanied by a bevy of neighborhood children. Her blue linen dress a bit wrinkled, and her short curly hair wind-tousled, she was finishing up the morning's canvassing.

"A few more houses and I'll knock off for lunch," she laughed, turning in at a long steep driveway. The woman of the house, Mrs. T. M. Deal, was out in the backyard combining the job of painting the kitchen windows with getting a sun tan, and her mother entertained the visitors while Mrs. Deal "slipped into something."

"Woman-power survey?" the elder woman asked. "I think it's a fine idea. We really have a man-power shortage around here. My daughter is having to paint the house herself, and, as there just aren't any maids any more, I've been over here washing clothes myself all morning."

When Mrs. Van Houten explained that they were asking all women between 19 and 50 to fill out questionnaires, the woman added—"Well, I'm over the age limit, but my daughter will do fine."

The daughter, plump, brunet, mother of twins and a 9-year-old boy, was "glad to do anything I can," and commented that "my husband was formerly a member of the National Guard, and furious because he can't get in the Army."

On the way to the red brick house around the corner, Mrs. Van Houten and Mrs. O. M. Coleman, district warden of the neighborhood who'd dropped by to see how things were going, discussed the job.

"Everyone's been grand," Mrs. Van Houten said. "You just say air raid warden and it's like open sesame. They invite you in to sit down and sometimes they even offer you a soft drink." Mrs. Coleman agreed—"I've had no trouble at all on my street (which is near-by Druid place), except at one house where there are two old maids who refused to answer any questions at all."

The War Department had tactfully stated the age question—"approximate age," but both women said that hardly any of the women questioned were reluctant to answer exactly.

The next house was the McMullen home, 1141 North avenue, where 16-year-old Betty and her slack-suited boy friend were playing a bit of jive music. "Mother's not home," Betty said, as she came to the door with a Persian kitten in her arms. "but can I help you?" She answered all the questions about her mother without trouble, except, a little confused, she answered the question, "What was your highest grade at school," with, "A, I guess," before Mrs. Van Houten explained that the question meant how long one had attended school.

Her father's draft status had Betty stumped for a minute, too, but with the help of the boy friend, who was up on such things, they figured out what it ought to be and Mrs. Van Houten moved on down the street.

An over-zealous worker from the adjoining precinct had already canvassed the rest of the houses in that block, so Mrs. Van Houten, tired but still cheerful, turned up Mayson avenue at the corner.

"Funny thing," she puffed as she climbed the steep grade. "Had a man come to the door at one house this morning, he

CONGRESS CLEANS CALENDAR, TAKES FIRST VACATION OF WAR

Senators Drop Battle Against Food Subsidies

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(AP)—With a swift burst of activity, congress wiped its calendar clean of major pending legislation and recessed tonight until September 14—the first lengthy vacation it has taken since the war's outbreak.

The legislators, in clearing the way to go home, swiftly approved $4,302,120,234 in appropriations and dropped a half dozen controversies including the quarrel with the administration over whether subsidies should be paid to "roll back" retail food prices.

At 4:49 p. m. (Atlanta time) the senate approved the resolution to recess and at 5:22 p. m. the house followed suit, voting amid cheers and whistles. There were only a few scattered "noes." The resolution actually took effect at 5:33 p. m., when the house knocked off work, the senate having done so some minutes earlier.

It was agreed that the members could be called back to Washington at any time by President Roosevelt, congressional officers, or the Democratic and Republican legislative leaders.

Yield Often

The senate had to yield point after point to the house in order to get the vacation which already had been delayed a week by disagreements between the two.

First, of all, the senate abandoned by a vote of 34 to 33 its demand for inclusion of a ban on food subsidy payments in a resolution continuing the Commodity Credit Corporation until January 1. The house had refused to accept this senate amendment and leaders had warned it would bring a veto from President Roosevelt. The resolution was then speedily sent to the White House.

Senator Maloney, Democrat, Connecticut, made the motion for the senate to recede from its amendment.

Calling the motion "altogether novel," Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, said opponents of subsidies would be in a "ridiculous position" if they supported the motion.

"I'm asked to recede and take back my own vote," he said. "It is little better than assenting itself to talk about preserving the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation," George declared. "It has already expired. If we can revive it now, we can revive it in September after the summer recess."

Next the senate bowed to house wishes and dropped its insistence on continuing government crop insurance. This permitted final passage of a $253,256,000 "catch-all" deficiency appropriation. This carried money for overtime payments to federal workers, emergency funds for President Roosevelt's use in conducting the war, and $15,000,000 for loans to rehabilitate farm land damaged by this year's floods.

Meantime, the House Agriculture Committee got rid of another controversy by simply pigeonholing a senate-approved bill to raise the ceiling price on corn from $1.07 to $1.40 a bushel, Chicago basis. Here again, an expectation that the President would veto such a bill figured in the decision, reached on a 9-to-6 vote.

Finally, the senate dropped its demand that it be allowed to pass on the qualifications of any employees of war agencies who are paid $4,500 a year or more. Sponsored by Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, this would have required nomination and senate confirmation of such employees. Its backers asserted the war agencies are full of policymaking officials on whom the senate should have a chance to pass. Opponents said it was a patronage grab.

War Agency Feud. The senate's recession from its demand cleared the way to the White House for a $2,911,697,224 appropriation to run the war agencies in the 12 months beginning July 1. The bulk of the big appropriation is for the merchant shipbuilding program, but funds also are included to run such agencies as the Office of Price Administration and the Office of War Information.

It set a precedent, too, for the senate to withdraw a similar amendment it had attached to the $1,127,167,010 labor-federal security supply bill. When this was done the measure was shot on to the White House, clearing the congressional calendar of all major appropriations bills.

"The American people will certainly ask in 1944 who dictates the policies of this government," he said. "Are they dictated by the people through the votes of their representatives here or are they dictated by outside agencies?"

Atlantan Ties 1st WAC-Yank Knot Overseas

An Atlanta chaplain performed the first wedding to take place overseas between a WAC and an American soldier, the Associated Press reported yesterday from Algiers.

He is Lieutenant Colonel Cecil B. Lawter, former minister of the Inman Park Presbyterian church, and known to Atlantans for the Easter sunrise services which were under his charge for several years. He joined in matrimony Staff Sergeant Virgil E. Major, of Ridge-way, Mont., and Auxiliary First Class Marjorie A. Wilson, of Berkeley, Cal. The ceremony took place in Algiers.

The bride wore her official tan summer uniform, her overseas cap perched primly on her head and carried a small bouquet of calla lilies. The groom, despite long training in facing difficult situations as waist gunner of a B-17 bomber during the Mediterranean campaign, was "not the least nervous man in the church," the dispatch said.

Colonel Lawter, who received his commission as a chaplain more than two years ago, has risen swiftly in the service. He left behind him a wife and two children who are staying for the duration with his wife's mother in Clinton, South Carolina.

The romance, at whose culmination Colonel Lawter officiated, started when Major met Miss Wilson three months ago at the Red Cross club. WAC Pauline Sully, of Klamath Falls, Ore., was the bridesmaid, and P. F. C. Larry Forrester was the best man. WAC Theodora Corrieau, of Providence, R. I., sang "Because" before the ceremony.

The first WAC-overseas wedding was performed in Algiers last Sunday, when Josephine McLain, of Pittsburgh, Pa., married Lance Corporal Hubert Heckman, but the corporal was British and the event didn't count as a full-fledged American romance held in an occupied land.

Carrollton Lawyer Dies in Courtroom

Judge Leon Hood, Carrollton (Ga.) attorney, dropped dead yesterday while trying a case in Fulton superior courtroom.

Judge Hood was admitted to the bar in 1901 and served eight years as judge of the Carrollton city court.

He is survived by his wife and three sons, Taylor and Walter Hood, of Carrollton, and James Hood, of New York city.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Harry G. Poole.

Soviets Lure Foe Into Wedge Ambush

LONDON, Friday, July 9.—(AP)—German tanks drove still another wedge in Russian lines in the Belgorod sector below the Kursk bulge yesterday in history's greatest armored conflict, but Moscow declared early today that the Red army stood firm elsewhere and even had recovered some lost ground to the north.

The Russians smashed 304 more German tanks and 161 enemy planes for a four-day toll of 1,843 tanks and 810 planes, said the midnight bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor. German casualties had passed the 35,000 mark, the communique said. Five thousand enemy troops fell Thursday in a single narrow sector of the Kursk-Orel front, where the Germans hurled 90,000 men against Red army lines without achieving a breakthrough, it said.

In the Belgorod sector the Russians said their troops had allowed the Axis tanks to get through, cutting off the enemy infantry and "inflicting devastating blows on them," while Russian antitank gunners and tank crews began whittling down the enemy armor in the wedge.

This statement offered some hope that the German wedge soon would be wiped out in this sector, where the Germans have advanced four times in as many days.

In the Kursk-Orel sector Russian counterattacks were said to have "dislodged the enemy from a number of populated places occupied during the first day of the offensive." This was the first Soviet admission that the Nazis had penetrated the area.

Nazi Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge was said to be using

U. S. Subs Sink 10 Jap Supply, Transport Ships

By JOHN H. HIGHTOWER.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(AP)—Destruction of 10 Japanese transport and supply ships, important to the enemy's sprawling Pacific empire, was announced today by the Navy.

The ships were sunk by American submarines which also damaged four medium-sized cargo vessels. The latest undersea blows to be reported against the enemy's merchant fleet raised to 283 the total number of enemy vessels which have been reported sunk or damaged by United States undersea craft in the Pacific since the war started.

This total consists of 200 ships sunk, 29 probably sunk and 54 damaged.

Today's Navy communique described the ships destroyed as a large transport, a medium-sized transport, two medium-sized cargo vessels, one large and one medium-sized tanker, one large cargo ship, one medium-sized passenger-cargo ship, one small cargo vessel and one small schooner.

This communique came a little more than a week after the last previous war bulletin on American undersea operations against Japanese supply lines. The previous report was made by the Navy on June 28. There was no official comment as to whether the short time interval indicated a stepping up of the submarine campaign.

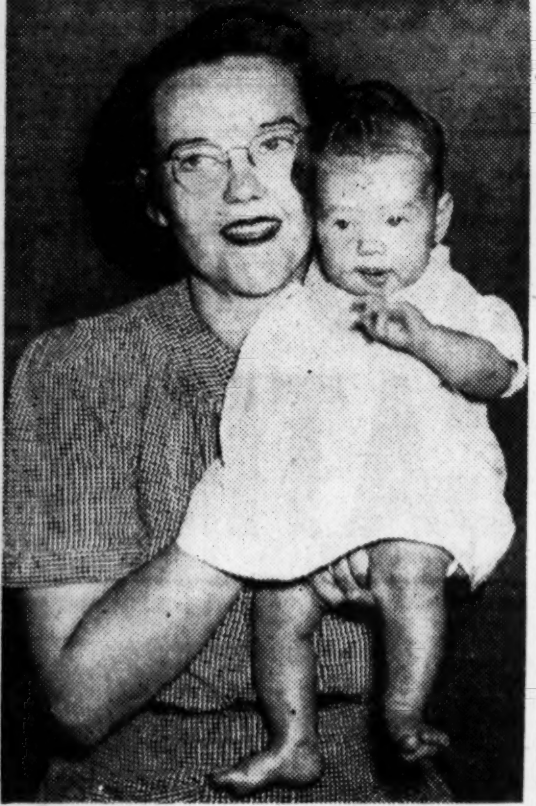

Secretary Knox said recently that the undersea force in the Pacific was being augmented steadily rather than by spurts, and indicated that the increase had been quite substantial as a result of a steady buildup in American production.

The Navy gave no details of the operations in which these Japanese ships were destroyed.

N. Y. Newsman Charged With Aiding Japan

NEW YORK, July 8.—(AP)—Frederick Heizer Wright, identified by a federal grand jury as a New York Daily News copy editor, was indicted today on charges that he acted as a paid agent for the Japanese government without notifying the state department of his employment.

U. S. Attorney Howard F. Corcoran, who obtained the indictment which also contains a conspiracy count, said "there was no evidence that Wright's superiors on the newsy knew he had any knowledge of the activities complained of in the indictment."

Corcoran said the indictment, which charges Wright with acting as a Japanese agent from January 1931 to December 6, 1942 in violation of a 1917 statute, was obtained after an investigation conducted by naval intelligence and the federal bureau of investigation.

The indictment charged that Wright, in his capacity as an agent of the Japanese government, investigated and obtained information concerning the China Defense Supplies Corporation and the nature and quantity of the materials and supplies which had been and were to be shipped to China by the United States.

It also alleged that Wright, in return for his salary and payment of expenses, edited the speeches and correspondence of Japanese consuls and vice consuls in a territory that extended along the east coast from Maine to Georgia, and that he also conducted an investigation of Communist activity in the United States and prepared reports which he submitted to the Japanese on the personal backgrounds of various individuals supposed to be Communists.

Under the conspiracy count, it was alleged that Wright and the Japanese government were agreed that Wright would cause articles concerned with Japanese subjects to be published in the Daily and Sunday News but that Wright's employment as a Japanese agent would be kept secret from the Daily and Sunday News.

Ernie Pyle Reports:

No Reveille for WACS In Africa—Too Busy

By ERNIE PYLE.
(Third of Five Articles on the WACS.)
NORTH AFRICA.—(By Wireless)—For some weird and unfathomable reason known only to the strange creatures themselves, women love to drill. But the WACS in North Africa don't get to do much drilling. They're too busy doing their regular jobs.

Those of the WACS who live at the edge of town in a convent are marched about a quarter of a mile every morning to board the trucks that take them downtown. That and a 15-minute drill period once a week is all the drilling they get.

No Reveille.
The ones who live in an old office building downtown don't even get that. In fact they don't even have reveille. Horn-toting at sunrise would be impractical, for the girls wear shift, clear around the clock, like factory workers, and at dawn many of them have barely got to sleep.

Their home life is very much like life at college. They sleep in double-decker beds, some of them French iron beds, some carpeted on boards. All the beds have springs. The girls sleep between Army blankets, with one rough sheet. They are issued seersucker pajamas, either light blue or peach-colored. Towels are crowded. There isn't too much space to put things.

Dormitories Neat.
After careful yoo-hooing and peeking ahead by the officer in command, I was allowed to snoop around into the sacred precincts of the girls' dormitories and rooms. Everything was neat, since the girls are soldiers now. They make their own beds, and do their own washing. Practically every one of them brought an electric iron from home. Probably the most typical sight in a WAC barracks is a girl bending over an ironing board.

In one downtown barracks the girls hang their washing on half of the roof, keeping the other half for sunbathing. Clotheslines are constantly filled with towels, stockings, slips, shirts and panties. The officer who took me around said: "You're the first man who has even seen this many pairs of WAC panties at one time."

3 Skirts Apiece.
And I said: "Madam, due to the rigors of old age and the encroachment of war upon my spare time I have never seen even one pair of WAC panties before."

Each girl is issued three khaki skirts and nine shirts. They are not allowed to roll up their sleeves, and they must wear the cotton stockings and shoes issued to them. French girls who are the equivalent of our WACS wear anklets, which look infinitely better.

The girls are not allowed to wear jewelry, except signet or wedding rings, and no nail polish. The first week they were here it was a poor WAC indeed who didn't have at least three Algerian bracelets showered upon her by startled and adoring G. I.'s, but since they weren't allowed to wear them, most of them sent the bracelets home.

Wear Dog-Tags.
The girls have to wear dog-tags around their necks, the same as soldiers, but every one of them has her tag on a silver or gold chain instead of the Army's piece of string.

The girls don't have much time for dates. Those on daytime shifts work from 8 to 5, and many of them go back at night to work at night use that time to do their washing, pressing and letter-writing.

Lights go out at 10 o'clock, and the roll is taken every night to catch anybody who is staying out. Each girl gets an 11 o'clock pass once a week, and half a day off once a week.

Every one of the girls has already learned passable French, and some of them are expert at it. Frequent Dances.
There are frequent dances and beach parties given by various Army units. When a dance is planned, the Army sends notice that so many WACS are wanted. The notice is put on a bulletin board, and any WACS who want to go put down their names.

When mail comes, a list of those who have letters is put on the bulletin board. The day I was there the typewritten list was headed, "Come and get it, you sweet little things."

There is also a full-length mirror near the front door of the downtown barracks, and above the mirror a sign which says, "Check Your Appearance."

I don't believe the girls have over the second division. The first division signed 275 decrees, the second 263.

"Eighty-five per cent of the petitioners were women," said Clerk J. H. Bush, most of whom were 21. Their complaints were usually nagging, habitual intoxication, or desertion.

He added that 2 per cent of the divorces were war brides who married soldiers or sailors after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Most War Decrees.
Clerk Ivan Cochran said that only two of the petitioners failed to get their decrees. One was a man whose wife was insane. Although the petitioner complained of acts which took place before she went insane, the jury refused a divorce. The other petition turned down was that of a man who said that at the time of his marriage he was so intoxicated that he didn't know what he was doing. This was no grounds for divorce, the jury decided.

Bush pointed out that the 538 divorces granted this term was the highest in the history of the court, being 20 per cent more than were granted in 1942 during the July term.

Minor in Armed Forces Entitled to Dad's Help

The fact that a minor has enlisted in the armed forces and now draws an income from Uncle Sam does not arbitrarily release his father from a court order to contribute to his support, the Georgia supreme court ruled yesterday.

Raymond W. Torres, engineer-secretary of the Atlanta planning board, was held in contempt by the Fulton court of domestic relations when he ceased making payments to his 18-year-old son. The lower court's decision was upheld by the supreme court yesterday.

Tattnall Fugitive Loses Chicago Plea

The petition of George Kozielec, 26, alias George Mika, for a writ of habeas corpus was denied in criminal court at Chicago yesterday and he was ordered returned to Georgia authorities, who accused him of escaping with 25 other convicts from Tattnall prison in April.

Chief Justice John A. Sbarbaro, however, granted Kozielec a 30-day stay to permit his attorney to file a bill of exceptions.

Robert Proskowicz, 20, who Georgia authorities said escaped with Kozielec, waived extradition proceedings and was turned over to W. T. Wallace, deputy director of public safety.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(AP)—Eastern petroleum stocks, slowly increasing their rate of recovery from dangerously low levels, have risen to the highest point in four months, the Petroleum Administration for War reported today.

Stocks rose from 29.5 per cent of normal to 31.5, the best level since March 6, but Acting PAW Administrator Ralph K. Davies cautioned that eastern supplies are still 8.5 per cent below what the oil industry views as "a safe working level."

Choice of Holden Okayed by F D R

Nomination of Frank A. Holden, of Atlanta, as senatorial representative of the War Man-Power Commission in the Atlanta regional office at a salary of $4,500 per year, was approved by President Roosevelt yesterday, an announcement from Washington disclosed.

A prominent Atlanta attorney, Holden was a representative of Clarke county in the state legislature in 1920, and was later defeated by Judge Charles Brand for congressman from the 10th district.

Holden is a graduate of Georgia Military Academy and the University of Georgia.

Criticism of Georgia's 73-year-old divorce law requiring two decrees at different terms of court for severance of marriage ties was expressed yesterday by Judge Paul S. Etheridge, presiding over the first division of Fulton domestic relations court.

"Only one decree should be necessary," he told a jury which during the past three days has been granting first or second decrees at the rate of one every three minutes. "This would save both time and money."

538 Divorces.
The whirling July divorce mill came to a pause as the court gave the 538th decree of the annual three-day term, which tried uncontested cases. Since the inception of the domestic relations court, the summer term has been telescoped into three days.

It took two divisions to run through the calendar this year, Judge A. L. Etheridge presiding.

James A. Hall, Former DeKalb Editor, Is Dead

James Alexander Hall, 77, for many years editor and publisher of the DeKalb New Era and the father of Major Warner W. Hall, died yesterday at his home, 323 South Candler street, Decatur.

Hall, one of Georgia's most widely known newspapermen, was frequently quoted, not only by the Georgia press, but by leading papers of the nation.

He was best known in recent years for his column, "Random Remarks," which was frequently quoted.

Before becoming a publisher, Hall had worked for both Atlanta papers, having written a daily feature column for The Constitution.

During the Spanish-American War, Hall was news editor for the Atlanta Journal, and wrote a daily humorous column called "In Crackerland." In later years, at The Constitution, Hall was associated with such pioneer journalists as the late Clark Howell Sr., Frank L. Stanton, P. J. Moran and others.

Born near Calhoun, the veteran newspaperman began contributing community news to the Calhoun Times while he was still in school, and later became a correspondent for The Constitution.

In 1890, Hall became a reporter on the Rome Tribune, where he worked under the late John Temple Graves. When the Rome Tribune was bought by Walter G. Cooper, Hall was made editor and manager.

In 1890, Hall purchased his home county newspaper, the Calhoun Times, which he edited until coming to Atlanta.

He is survived by his wife; a daughter, Mrs. O. C. Hopkins, of Kansas City, Mo.; one son, Major Hall, of the United States Army; a sister, Miss Bai Hall, of Decatur; two brothers, G. A. Hall, of Calhoun, Ga., and J. S. Hall, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at Trinity Chapel, with the Rev. J. L. Hamby and the Rev. W. A. Robinson officiating. Burial will be in Sain cemetery at Calhoun, Ga.

Nazis Seize Theaters;

Shows Not Party-Line

STOCKHOLM, July 8. — (AP) — Berlin dispatches said today Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels had taken over the operation of all German theaters from private operators because of dissatisfaction with the programs. The reports indicated he believed the programs were not attuned to the Nazi war effort.

Cook Exposes Gas Rationing Evasion Tricks

Commissioner Tells of 'Alarming Conditions' in State.

Declaring Georgia is serving as a gasoline terminal for supplying states which operate under a rationing program "considerably more liberal than ours," State Revenue Commissioner J. Eugene Cook said yesterday that the unjustness of the petroleum administration is "making criminals out of some of our citizens."

"One of the most alarming conditions brought about by the restrictions in the use of gasoline in Georgia," said Cook, "is that some of our citizens have begun to mix low-grade nontaxable fuel with high-test taxable fuel for use in passenger cars, trucks and other motor vehicles. The low grade fuel is tax free and used under a more liberal rationing arrangement with the idea that it would be used in farm tractors and stationary machinery and not on the highways."

The commissioner said he is now investigating a case which indicates that one distributor purchased approximately 8,000 gallons of nontaxable fuel and mixed it with 1,000 gallons of rationed taxable high test fuel, thereby producing 9,000 gallons of fuel suitable for any type of motor.

Hard to Check.

It is almost impossible to check against this method of rationing and tax evasion, he said. "While I propose to vigorously prosecute such cases, I am compelled to say that this situation is largely attributable to the rationing program," Cook added. "It is natural for a large portion of our citizens to find ways of evading laws and governmental regulations whenever they feel there is no justification for them."

The commissioner's statement was contained in a letter to Governor Arnall, supporting the chief executive's campaign to have Georgia removed from the restricted eastern seaboard ration area.

Pipe Lines Chief Carriers.

Cook said that receipt of gasoline through two pipe lines operating in the state has reduced to "inconsequential importance" demands of the state for tank car transportation by rail.

Of the 47,334,104 gallons of gasoline received in Georgia in March, Cook said, 39,420,449 gallons came by pipe line.

From Washington yesterday came an OPA announcement that one Georgia town near the Alabama line will be removed from the acute shortage area effective July 14. Secretary of Interior Ickes asked that West Point motorists have the value of their gas cards "A," "B" and "C" increased to four gallons.

$1,250,000 Salary Raises Asked of City

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

Salary increases for the city's 4,800 employees aggregating more than $1,250,000 a year were demanded yesterday by city council's finance committee meeting to compile a midyear finance sheet.

The committee took the salary problem under advisement and will meet in executive session at 7:30 p. m. Monday to decide what recommendation it will file with council Monday, July 19.

Chief among the mass of requests before the committee was one filed by Albert Gossett, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, which called for a blanket $20 monthly increase for every employee of the city, including school and nonschool workers. It would cost the government in excess of $1,000,000 a year, according to estimates by Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, chairman of the finance group.

Other requests dealt with individual raises for employees who, department heads said, were not in line with others doing similar work, and with institution of an automatic system of salary hikes over varying periods until each employee reaches the maximum pay for his particular classification.

Stafford W. Graydon, director of the personnel department, urged the committee to adopt a "scientific system of automatic increments" so that the "give and take of politics could be eliminated in adjusting salaries."

Committee members recommended that council provide $5,106.86 for purchase of 10 new motorcycles for the police department and to buy new equipment for the police department's identification bureau. Bureau equipment would cost $2,387.36 of the total amount.

B. Graham West, city comptroller, will determine the cost of establishing a branch library near Peachtree and Thirteenth streets in the fifth ward, beginning September 1. A delegation of citizens asked that it be created as of July 1 at a cost of $4,000 for the remainder of the year.

WOODMEN TO MEET.

Special meeting of Empire State Camp No. 7, Woodmen of the World, will be held at 8 p. m. today in the clubrooms. Several new members will be introduced.

McKellar Demand Howard W. Clark Dies at Age 53

C. H. Barker, regional director in Atlanta of operations for the National Youth Administration, yesterday ridiculed the demand of Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, for an investigation of expenditures by NYA in operating dairy farms in Georgia and Mississippi.

In a detailed statement, Barker said the NYA operated a dairy farm in connection with the Habersham youth project strictly as an "economy measure" and directly in connection with the training of 200 boys and girls in modern farming, which, he said, has been declared an industry essential to the war effort.

Cultivate Soviet, Win Peace, Says Briton

(The following article, written by Paul Winterton, noted Russian correspondent of the London News Chronicle, outlines the determination and courage of the Russians during the siege of Stalingrad, and also describes the cruelty of the Nazi during the present conflict. The article, broadcast by the British Broadcasting Company, is very timely in view of the new German offensive against the Russians.)

By PAUL WINTERTON,
London News Chronicle

First of all, I had better give you a few details about myself, and so establish my right to talk to you at all. I've just come back to England after fourteen months in Moscow and on the Russian front as correspondent of the London News Chronicle. I was in Stalingrad just after the destruction of the German Sixth Army. I saw Paulus, the commander of that Army, and his 24 generals. I was in Kharkov during that short period in the spring when the Russians held it again. I was in Rzhnev a few hours after the Nazis held it left. I met many of the most famous of the Red Army generals; I talked with German prisoners; I had conversations with women who had shot down enemy fighters, and young girls whose whole occupation was wrecking trains. I heard the grim story of the siege of Leningrad from the lips of men and women who had survived it, and I talked with one of the last Red Army men to leave Sebastopol. In short, as far as lay in my power, I "covered" the Russian war.

During my year with the Russians I acquired one very deep conviction: that in the interests of everybody, we have got to make the friendship now growing up between our two countries a permanent thing. The Russians are a great and virile people and are going to have a tremendous influence in the post-war world. If we can find a firm and lasting basis for co-operation with them after the war—I'll tell you later how I think that can be done—then we will be more than half way to winning the peace.

The Russians, of course, have themselves laid pretty solid foundations of good will in this country because of the remarkable fight they've put up against Hitler. Everywhere I go I hear unstinted praise of the Red Army and of the Russian workers whose unflinching efforts have made the Red Army's brilliant success possible. I'm sure that everyone by now has come to admire the Russian as a fighter and as a worker; you would admire him even more if you had seen him close up as I have.

Stalingrad. When people talk to me of Russian courage I always think of Stalingrad. You remember the details of that long and bloody struggle, but I want you to visualize the last stage of that battle through my eyes. I first saw the city just after dawn on a bitterly cold morning in February, a few hours after the main body of the German Sixth Army had surrendered. I had spent the night in a dugout near the famous factory settlement, and soon after daylight I picked my way through the ruins to the positions that the Russians had been defending. I was amazed by what I saw. I don't think people here realize just how much of Stalingrad the Nazis had taken—and just how precarious was the Russian foothold.

The Red Army lines ran along the top of a narrow strip of yellow broken cliff above the Volga. To this cliff the Russians were clinging with their teeth and nails. The Nazi dominated it by holding the Mamaev Kurgan, a long, high ridge running parallel with the river, and from this height they poured shells by the hundreds into the Russian positions. They had almost unchallenged mastery of the air, and they bombed at will. General Chukov, who was in charge of the defense, told me how the glass tumbler in his underground headquarters had been shattered to fragments as the whole city was rocked by the concussion of continuous explosions. He told me how in one raid alone he lost sixty members of his staff. In addition to their strength in the air, the Nazis had greatly superior numbers on the ground. They had room to maneuver, to switch their attack, and to bring up fresh supplies. The Russians had to carry every shell and every piece of

RETIRED ATLANTA COAL DEALER JOINS THOUSANDS WHO ENDORSE POW-O-LIN

"Best Medicine I Ever Saw." Declares Mr. Hadaway. This Purely Herbal Preparation Wins Praise of Atlanta Men and Women Who Have Put It to Test in Their Own Stubborn Cases.

Pow-o-lin is making so many staunch and lasting friends throughout Georgia, happy men and women from every walk of life who have received splendid benefits through its use, publicly endorse it. Mr. H. E. Hadaway, widely known retired coal dealer, residing at 771 Ashland avenue, N. E., Atlanta, declares:

"I give Pow-o-lin my public endorsement that others who may suffer as I did may profit by my happy experience with this splendid medicine. No matter what I ate I would suffer with indigestion, gas and bloating that would make me feel stuffy and smothered. My nerves felt lumpy, preventing needed sleep. Constipation filled my intestinal tract with offending waste that made me feel sluggish and aching all over. I had to dose with strong laxatives that upset me and made me feel weak and tremble. I ate so little I began to feel undernourished and weak, with hardly energy to do anything. I don't believe you could find a man or woman in Atlanta who felt more discouraged than I did.

"Pow-o-lin proved to be even better than recommended in my case. I am relieved of indigestion, smothering gas pressure and headaches. My nerves feel calm and I sleep better. Food tastes right and gives me strength and energy. The constipation and unnatural fatigue is relieved. Pow-o-lin gave me more relief than all the medicines I have used in 76 years."

Pow-o-lin is a purely herbal laxative preparation for the relief of distress as plagued Mr. Hadaway when due to constipation. Thousands praise it. At all Jacobs Drug Stores $1.25 size, 98c. By mail, add 10c for postage. (adv.)

have been almost entirely depopulated; towns have been destroyed and villages obliterated. Late last summer, when I was making a tour of the liberated areas near Rzhnev and collecting information about Hitler's so-called New Order, I asked to visit a small village of about a hundred peasant huts to talk to the survivors. We set off on foot along a hard mud road and walked, I suppose, a couple of miles. Then we climbed up a slight ridge, at the top of which my guide stopped: "Well, here we are," he said.

I looked around. There was nothing at all in sight—literally not a thing. It was just bare country. "What do you mean—here we are?" I asked. "I don't see anything."

"This is the village," said my guide. "This is what's left." I looked more closely at the ground on either side of the road, and I saw that he was right. Every dozen yards or so the soil was charred and black where a hut had been burned down, and there were red marks, too, where the brick chimneys of the wooden huts had been crushed and ground into the earth until the whole surface was flat. It was the most thorough bit of demolition I had ever seen. "There are a lot of villages like this," said the Russian.

Work and Sleep. Well, that is what it is like in the occupied areas. And what of the Russian workers in the cities behind the front? Their life consists almost solely of work and sleep, and rations compared with which our own rations here would seem like a series of banquets. They can buy virtually nothing at all in their shops. In winter their houses are practically unheated because of fuel shortage, and dark because of the need for economizing electricity.

Maybe what I have told you will have helped you to realize just how much Russia has suffered. I'm sure you will feel sympathy as well as admiration for her in her long ordeal. What is more, I'm certain that since our tremendous victory in Tunisia the Russians in their turn have begun to admire our own fighting qualities. As our share of the burden of war increases and our casualties begin to pile up, we shall not find the Russians indifferent to our losses. Sacrifice for a common end will help to bring us still more together.

But admiration and sympathy and battle for the same cause are still not enough. The secret of enduring friendship lies elsewhere. Before we can be real friends we need to know much more about each other. At present we in Britain know very little about what the Soviet Union is really like, and the Russians know even less about us.

Years of Sacrifice. To hear some British people talk, you would think that Russia was a country where—in peacetime at any rate—the workers all received the same pay, all lived very comfortably, and all did more or less as they liked. The fact is, of course, that during the past fifteen years of feverish construction, Russia has been a country of material poverty, stern discipline, and continuous sacrifice. If she hadn't been, Hitler would probably have won the Russian war by now. As for rates of pay in Russia, they vary quite as much as our own.

There are lots of Russians whose ideas about us are just as absurdly wrong. I shall never forget the astonishment of one young Russian when I told him in reply to a question that in Britain there were scores of thousands of working-class families who had a whole house to themselves with four or five rooms, and even a bathroom and kitchen which they didn't have to share with other families. He just couldn't believe it.

We have got to make up our minds that it will take a long time for us and the Russians to learn not only the facts about each other's lives but the reasons for those facts. I myself have spent three of the past fifteen years in Russia, but I still feel I know very little about the country. Then again, some people won't altogether like this fact-finding process, simply because for political reasons they prefer their prejudices and illusions.

A Sacred Impatience. But it has got to happen, this deliberate seeking after truth, for it is only on this basis of knowledge that we and the Russians can expect to come fully to like each other, and it is only by liking each other that we can hope to give our post-war relationship a firm and lasting foundation.

In a very short while now I shall be returning to Moscow. I quite expect that by the time I get there the storm will once again have broken over the eastern front. In the words of the Soviet writer Ilya Ehrenburg, "A sacred impatience to free our native land charges the close air like electricity."

I don't know when the battle will start, and I don't know who will start it. What I do know is that the Red Army is entering upon the campaign of 1943 with high hopes and stout hearts, and that whatever new trials may be ahead the fighting men of Russia will add fresh lustre to their bright Red Star.

'White Savage,' 'Hit the Ice' Will Open Today

By PAUL JONES.

"White Savage," Universal's new technicolor south seas adventure film which teams Maria Montez and Jon Hall for a second time, and which opens a week's engagement at the Fox theater, is a thoroughly engrossing bit of cinema entertainment, which puts special emphasis on romance, thrills and the beauty of Maria Montez.

Miss Montez puts her best foot forward in this film and most observers, after seeing "White Savage," will agree that she has plenty of what it takes to make a screen star.

"White Savage" is the story of a tramp shark fisherman and his successful efforts to capture the love of an island princess. It gives Miss Montez a great opportunity to display her beautiful figure and her extraordinary talents for acting.

She wears in this film a new substitute for the sarong—a "sheerong"—which is really eye-catching.

Several under-water scenes, plus the full color scenery of the mythical island, give added beauty to this fine photoplay.

Abbott-Costello Film Called Best Yet.

Abbott and Costello, two zanies who were named No. 1 box-office attraction of the nation, demonstrate their right to claim that title with their current laugh fete, "Hit the Ice," now playing at the Paramount theater.

We've seen all the comedies made by this duo and this, their latest, has our vote as their best yet. They're silly, but entertaining and they seem to turn each and every situation into a series of hilarious moments.

Ginny Simms is featured, singing several new numbers, and while her acting is not up to par, she makes up for it with her fine voice.

Abbott and Costello are two camera enthusiasts who become involved in a bank robbery when they snap a picture of the bank being held up.

With the police on their trail, they flee to Sun Valley. This is where all the fun begins.

Russians Safe From Jap Stab, Simpson Says

Analyst Studies Effects of New Nazi-Soviet Struggle.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.
Whatever the real Nazi objective in the new and stupendous battle in Russia is, the fighting is raging under circumstances tending to forbid any present Japanese intervention to aid her fellow conspirators in Germany and Italy.

Russia has small need to fear a stab-in-the-back attack from Japan at this stage. American offensive moves in the South and Southwest Pacific and in Aleutian theaters makes it all but inconceivable that Tokyo could be dragged by Berlin into striking at Siberia.

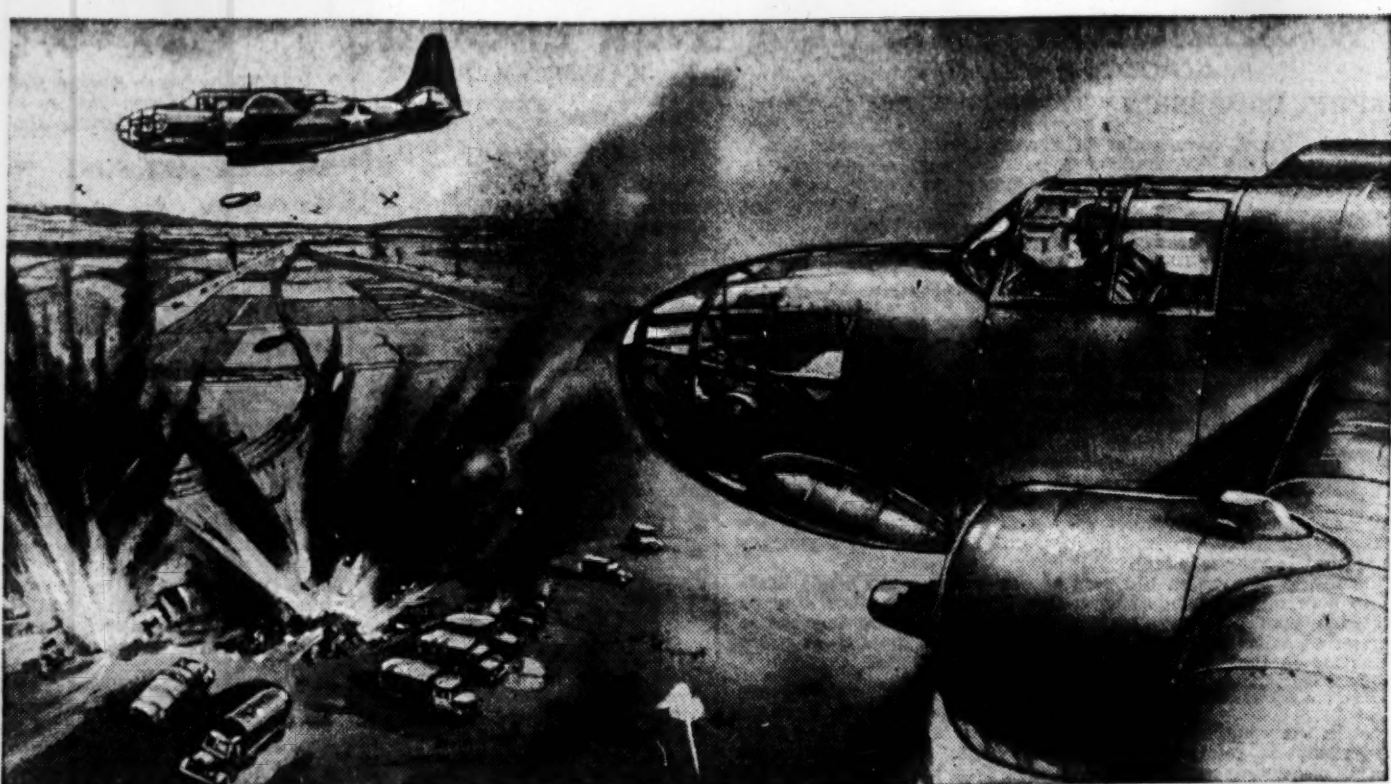

The Japanese war lords are definitely confronted today with what Prime Minister Churchill so recently called the "supreme challenge" of American sea power. He had a hand in Washington high strategy councils in the shaping of events in the Pacific calculated to lure the Japanese main fleet to decisive action.

Co-ordination.
It probably would be going much too far to say that the American Pacific offensives are actually co-ordinated with expected developments in Russia. That they were timed in relation to what was being prepared against the Axis for delivery this year from Africa and the British Isles is obvious.

Taking the weight of Axis pressure off Russia was an officially stated prime purpose of the Washington-revised strategy directives, however. And included in that pressure as Moscow must view it has been the possibility of a Japanese blow at Siberia timed, as was the attack on Pearl Harbor, to meet Axis needs in Europe.

A global war calls for global strategy, even if there is much to be said for the Anglo-American leadership to its regret has not yet succeeded in integrating its own and Russian operational planning.

Assumption.
It is permissible, therefore, to assume that the Pacific offensives which are tying down Japan are a part of what General George C.

AIR LIAISON—So close has co-operation between the U. S. Army Air Force and the Royal Air Force become in the attack on Hitler's Europe, that American and British airmen fly in the same crews. In the attack on an Axis transport concentration sketched here, Britons were in the U. S. light Douglas bombers as the bombardiers. (London Sphere drawing by Roland Davies; copyright King Features Syndicate.)

Marshall, Army chief of staff, calls the "pattern of victory" followed by the United Nations. They are an integral part of what Moscow and Berlin now stress as "the Battle of Kursk," remote as they are geographically.

And that Berlin phrase, contained in a non-official broadcast which for the first time admitted it was an offensive, not a defensive fight the Nazi armies in Russia are waging, still leaves doubt as to its strategic or tactical objectives. It implies that it is only reduction of the Kursk salient, thrusting deeply westward between Orel and Belgorod that is aimed at.

The Kursk salient, last indicated as extending from 40 to 60 miles west of the important rail center from which it takes its name, is dangerous to the Germans. It gravely threatens the main rail and road communication network via Bryansk, Smolensk and Vitebsk upon which depends the whole south flank of the Nazi

Cobb Utilities Up Tax Values $455,000

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
MARIETTA, Ga., July 8.—Nine public utilities, which operate in Cobb county, have increased their tax values $455,000 over last year, County Commissioner George H. McMillan announced today. McMillan said the increases meant $7,500 in tax dollars.

The receipts from the utilities were increased as the result of industrial growth and expansion of properties, McMillan pointed out. He added that tax receipts, in spite of these increases, are slightly off last year's figures due mainly to the one-fourth reduction in gasoline taxes.

Long Dry Spell Hurts Hancock Truck Crops

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
SPARTA, Ga., July 8.—Hancock county vegetable growers are feeling much better since the recent rains and expect to have enough surplus in a few days to crowd the local canneries again.

The long dry spell practically ruined the truck crops planted in the early spring and the canneries have been doing only a small business.

The fruit crop is almost a complete failure throughout the county.

TODAY, AS IN THE GAY 90'S...
it's Kinsey among old friends

HOST: After going over the garden, Joe, what's better than a shower and a tall, cool drink?

GUEST: Right you are, Old Timer. But, say, what a Victory Garden you have. My hat's off to you. You didn't by any chance major in agriculture at State?

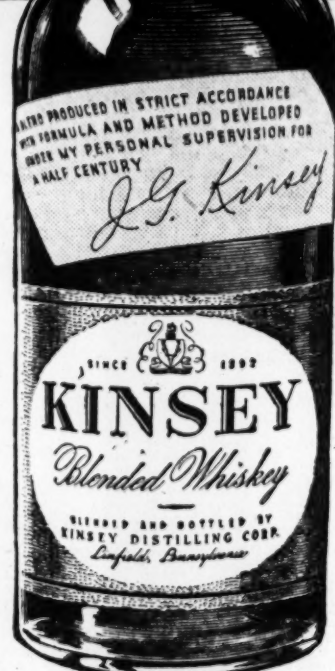

HOST: Cut out the modesty, Joe. For a beginner, you sure should feel proud of that grand garden of yours, too. Those tomatoes have mine licked a mile.

GUEST: Well, if they taste as good as

NOW—A GAY DECADE SPEAKS:
MR. GAY 90'S: A salute to you gentlemen, and your Victory Gardens. In my day, too, the proudest toasts were celebrated with Kinsey. With America's oldest living distiller, Mr. J. G. Kinsey, still supervising the blending, you can be sure of the same high quality in this Golden Anniversary Whiskey.

19 Bomb Raids Batter Sicilian Airdromes

Hidden Italian Radio Station Appeals for Overthrow of Duce.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 8.—(P)—The Allied commanders sent heavy aerial squadrons across the length and breadth of Sicily and Sardinia yesterday, throwing in 19 assaults on the Sicilian airdrome network of Gerbini alone and meeting no fighter opposition over that scarred and blasted area.

Bomb attacks were reaching the scope of an unending storm—above Gerbini itself there had hardly been a moment in the past 24 hours when the sky was clear of Allied raiders—and as this storm came closer to the Italian mainland there were increasing indications that Mussolini was having difficulty in maintaining Italian unity.

Monitors of the Tunis radio disclosed that a clandestine Italian station calling itself "Radio Italo Balbo" had been for three successive nights appealing to the people to overthrow the Duce.

"Doomed to Disgrace."
The perverted Italians of the present Fascist party are doomed to die in disgrace," said one of these broadcasts.

"Italians, this group of faithful disciples of the great Marshal Balbo appeal to your morality as Catholics. The scandals that soil our people must cease and the criminals must be punished."

Marshal Italo Balbo was killed on a flight over Libya in 1940.

Yesterday's air attacks over a great area, against airdromes and enemy communications, cost a total of five Allied planes lost, and 10 enemy planes were destroyed.

Other Points Hit.
Aside from Gerbini, other points hard hit included Palermo, Sciacca, Borizzo, Milo and Comiso.

Enemy fighter opposition was officially described as on a "reduced scale."

American Warhawk fighters over Borizzo airdrome for almost an hour scored the biggest single victory, shooting down six enemy craft.

The Italian command, in a communique broadcast from Rome, asserted that Italian torpedo planes had hit and in all likelihood sunk two Allied steamers aggregating 13,000 tons. It was claimed also that a total of 19 Allied planes had been shot down.

Farm Equipment To Be Auctioned

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
MARIETTA, Ga., July 8.—General auction sales designed to help farmers buy and sell scarce, as well as war-rationed, machinery and other equipment will be held monthly in Marietta and surrounding communities, the Cobb County Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the plan, announced today.

The first sale will be held here July 31.

The auctions are planned to offer a clearing house for buyers and sellers, Chamber of Commerce officials said. They pointed out that persons seeking to buy goods and make a profit through these sales will be discouraged. A small charge for items sold will take care of the expenses of the auctions, officials said.

Two-Year-Old Killed by Car Driven by Dad

Father Backs Truck Over Statesboro Child.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
STATESBORO, Ga., July 8.—A two-year-old Statesboro child was killed instantly here this afternoon when struck by a truck driven by his father.

The boy, Bobby Ben Rushing, was killed in the driveway of his home when his father backed a truck out to return to work after the lunch hour. According to the father, he sent the small child into the house with a package just prior to backing the truck and did not know the child had returned to the yard.

Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Rushing, the child is survived by a brother, Billy Rushing; his maternal grandfather, Lonnie Brannen and his paternal grandfather, Ben Rushing.

Funeral services for the boy will be held tomorrow afternoon at 5 p. m. at Middleground church near Statesboro. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

"Stream of Victories"

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, in his message to the Chinese people marking the sixth anniversary of his country's war with Japan, predicted the utter defeat of Japan within two years.

Confidently, the Chinese leader said: "In the seventh year of our war of resistance an offensive that will deal crushing blows to the enemy will be started in various theaters of the world and there will be an unending stream of victories."

Chiang has been notable for his reticence and conservatism in his predictions as to the course of the war. Thus when he speaks with such confidence there is strongest probability that what he foresees will come true.

In another portion of his message Chiang stressed the importance of early agreement between the four leading powers of the United Nations—the United States, Russia, Britain and China—on postwar plans. He pointed out that unless these four are agreed in advance on their future policies the military victories they win may be tossed away.

The warning thus voiced by Chiang cannot be too emphatically stressed. His words have pointed the way and, if the other allies do not heed his advice and seek, now, complete working agreement, the final collapse of the Axis may find them confused, working at cross purposes and thus laying the foundation for new and worse conflicts in the future.

Chiang outlined, in four groups, the peace objectives he hopes to see achieved. That outline is one of considered honesty, products of a mind thoroughly in accord with the goal of freedom for all men.

Chiang's peace program calls for sacrifice by some of the nations. It can only be prayed that forces of greedy nationalism, in any nation, will be unable to block the ideals set forth in the Chiang proposals and that men all over the world will understand the necessity of sacrifice for peace, just as hard experience is teaching the necessity of sacrifice for war.

Survey of Woman Power

Headed by a special detail of WACS, a force including 6,000 air raid wardens of Greater Atlanta, is seeking specific information on the number of women in this city who may be available either for service in the women's uniformed organizations or in war work.

Questionnaires will be distributed at every home, asking every woman between the ages of 19 and 50 to fill one out and return it. It is hoped, when the survey is complete, to have a comprehensive picture as to the available woman power in the area and their availability for war service.

A similar survey has just been successfully conducted in Birmingham, and surveys are either under way or planned in cities all over the nation. Results of the surveys will be sent to the War Department at Washington for present or future use as needed.

While this survey is entirely on voluntary basis, it is hoped the result will approximate the exact information obtained as to the national man power through selective service registration of all men between 18 and 65. The woman survey does not imply any contemplated draft of women, but it does seek to provide an approximate estimate for the entire country and thus enable reliable estimation as to the ratios which may be expected to respond to calls for service in different war categories.

It is, therefore, urged that every woman fill out her questionnaire and return it. She will thus contribute to the successful completion of a necessary survey of potential national strength.

The First Two Amendments

Voters of Georgia, on August 3, will pass upon 28 amendments to the state constitution, submitted after approval by both houses of the legislature and by the Governor. Although the number of constitutional amendments is less than in recent years, it is doubtful if more important changes to the foundation law of the state have ever been submitted.

Study, for instance, the first two as they will appear on the ballots. These two are intended to forever remove control of education in this state out of politics. They are fulfillment of one of the chief planks of the platform on which Governor Arnall was elected.

All Georgians remember the scandalous use of chicanery and executive power when Governor Talmadge, in order to force the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia to do his will, deliberately packed that board with new members pledged, in advance, to obey his orders. As a result of that outrageous action, Georgia's state university and many of its branches were removed from the accredited list. The whole structure of public education in the state was discredited and lowered.

So, the two first amendments, submitted without dissenting vote in the legislature, provide that neither the Board of Regents of the University nor the State Board of Education, which controls the public schools, can ever be placed under political control again. Both amendments forbid the Governor from becoming a member of either board.

Members of the Board of Regents now in office will serve for the terms for which they have been confirmed and their successors will serve for seven-year terms. Temporary vacancies on the board will be filled by secret ballot of remaining members.

The second amendment sets up a State Board of Education consisting of one member from each congressional district. Senate confirmation of members is required. No employee of a public or private educational institution or system may serve on the board, nor may members of any department of education, nor any publisher of textbooks. Seven-year terms are so staggered that not more than two appointments fall in one year. Temporary vacancies will be filled as on the Board of Regents.

Adoption of these amendments will constitute the greatest safeguard for the freedom of education in Georgia. From grade schools to the university itself, no consideration save academic qualifications must control selection of faculties, no selfish outside influence, political or commercial, must interfere with the freedom of education our children enjoy.

This is fundamental to a democracy. Voters will undoubtedly cast their ballots in overwhelming majority for these two amendments, the first on the ballot, when August 3 voting takes place.

The Eighth Air Force of the United States Army has now been operating from British air bases for a year. At the end of that time the scoreboard reads, 1,199 enemy planes shot down, to 276 American planes lost.

These figures do not include enemy planes probably destroyed, 525, or enemy planes damaged, 501.

In all, 7,067 sorties were made against Germany and German-occupied Europe. A sortie is each flight by each plane. They have dropped 11,423 tons of bombs on 102 industrial targets, naval bases and war plants.

It is said by air authorities that a loss of 10 per cent of the planes taking part in an offensive raid over enemy-held territory is not too costly. The Eighth Air Force, during its year of operations, lost only 3.91 per cent of the planes taking part.

There is the scoreboard for one phase of American war operations in one theater of war. All around the globe, wherever the enemy can be met, Americans in all branches of the fighting services are setting up commensurate scores.

If we, on the home production front, but keep up an increasing stream of equipment to our men who do the fighting, the war's outcome is no longer in doubt. The scoreboard tells us that.

Georgia Editors Say:

(From The Tifton Gazette.)

After eight years, the Works Projects Administration finally has passed into history—one of the few Roosevelt-created agencies to be abandoned completely. During its existence, under whatever name, the WPA spent approximately $10,500,000,000 and employed in the neighborhood of 8,500,000 persons. It reached into just about every community of the nation in one project or another and, in some cases, the work it has done will be lasting. In some instances, it was temporary; work created for the primary purpose of giving employment rather than constructing lasting projects. Frequently, the WPA has been a storm center in politics, and has been praised and damned heartily all over the country, usually upon the basis of local conditions. The WPA finally is gone; a victim of the war. But it has not been forgotten.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

STIRRING DISSENSION WASHINGTON, July 8.—The arrival in the United States of General Henri Giraud, commander of French troops in North Africa, has been made the occasion for a new outburst of agitation by misguided souls in behalf of General Charles de Gaulle, organizer of the Free French forces and co-president, along with Giraud, of the newly formed French Committee on National Liberation.

De Gaulle's elements, both here and abroad, are trying to stir up dissension among the French over our dealings with General Giraud. Efforts are being made to have it appear that we are not recognizing the true representatives of France in refusing to give de Gaulle full command of all French forces now fighting on our side. The newspapers are likely to be flooded with an unusual flow of propaganda on the subject during General Giraud's visit here.

Unfortunately, the State Department is not in a position to discuss the situation with any degree of frankness. It cannot very well tell the country why we are supporting Giraud instead of de Gaulle. Reasons of diplomacy require that it remain silent.

This forced silence on the part of our government lends itself to a certain amount of confusion. The de Gaulleists may be expected to take advantage of it by pressing their case forward in a manner to make it appear some of our officials have been guilty of bungling in their handling of the French problem.

SIMPLE PROBLEM The French problem, so far as we are concerned, is very simple. We have no interest in the squabbles of Frenchmen as to who shall lead their forces, except in relation to the common fight we are making on the Axis. We only want to make sure that the most competent man is in charge.

We have no particular interest in the liberation of France from the Germans, except in so far as it determines the defeat of Hitler. We have the fullest sympathy for France in her present plight, it is true, but we are not fighting the war merely that France may be freed.

We are fighting it to save our own skins against the ruthless ambitions of Hitler and Tojo. All other considerations are secondary.

Hence we are not in the slightest degree interested in the political cat-and-dog fight between de Gaulle and Giraud as to which of them shall be accepted as the accredited leader of the French.

WHY WE CHOSE GIRAUD In picking General Giraud to head up the French forces which we liberated when we moved into North Africa we were guided entirely by considerations of merit. Giraud was a distinguished French general who had escaped from a Nazi prison camp and who, following his escape, had refused to do the bidding of the Vichy collaborationists.

He was mature and experienced, a full-fledged general at the time of the war's outbreak. "De Gaulle, on the other hand, had been only a colonel until the last days before the fall of France. It appears to be true, as his supporters claim, that he had a brilliant military record.

But in balancing the qualifications of one man against the other our own military leaders determined that Giraud had superior qualities, instead of de Gaulle, to head up the French fighting forces in Africa.

"DOG-IN-THE-MANGER" Ever since then de Gaulle has taken a dog-in-the-manger attitude. At the time of the Casablanca meeting between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, some months back, it was necessary for the Prime Minister to threaten to cut off his pay to get him to the conference. After he got there he took a high and mighty position, refusing even to have his picture taken with Giraud.

The story of how he referred to himself as the modern French Joan of Arc has already been told. Mr. Roosevelt had to jerk him up with sharp words before he would consent to meet with Giraud.

More recently, at the time of the formation of the French Committee on National Liberation, he revealed more of his prima donna characteristics by walking out on the meeting in Africa. Before that, he refused to go to Africa for a while unless he was allowed to name the meeting place for the conferences.

OVERAMBITIOUS The cold truth of it is, to put it mildly, only a prima donna, but something of mental poise. On the assumption that the war will be won by the Allies anyway, he is credited with being interested not so much in helping win it as in advancing his own personal political fortunes.

After the fall of France, the British picked him up and proceeded to inflate him as a rallying point for Frenchmen desirous of liberating their country. He was a lot of blarney, but de Gaulle's head.

Now that more practical war moves are in the making, the British are finding it difficult to deflate him. All of this is known only too well by our own officials. We got his measure pretty well when the President and his mission went to Casablanca.

WE CAN'T SAY ANYTHING But, for obvious diplomatic reasons, neither the State Department nor the White House can afford to say anything. To do so would only antagonize a lot of blind followers of de Gaulle who have come to look on him as a hero. Mr. Roosevelt, however, has shown his feelings in the matter by inviting General Giraud to the United States—an invitation heretofore denied de Gaulle.

Secretary of State Hull has summed up the situation about as clearly as it could be. In a private conversation with a senator recently he is reported to have made the rather picturesque observation that "de Gaulle is more kinds of a damn fool than I ever knew existed."

That is about the way he is regarded in Washington.

SILHOUETTES

In the News

If you read your Wednesday morning paper with a reasonable degree of thoroughness, you must have noticed several stories dealing with a automobile tags, licenses, stamps and so on.

Despite the war, the autos make a lot of news. There was the story about Governor Arnall seeking an easing of gasoline rationing in Georgia. Which appears to be rather a hope.

less undertaking, in view of developments.

Then there was the story that motorists in the northeastern states would be permitted to drive their cars on one vacation trip, provided other means of transportation are not available. That doesn't apply to Georgia, where there is no ban on pleasure driving, provided you have the requisite gasoline coupons.

And, even for those states where the pleasure ban is in force, there is a joker. For, while permitting such vacation trips, it does not provide the gasoline for the trips. You can make such a trip, if your ration board grants the permit and if you've accumulated sufficient "A" coupons to supply the motor fuel.

Again, a story by Herman Hancock told results of a traffic survey in Atlanta, showing the value of the staggered hours plan. Automobile statistics just bristled through that story, from start to finish.

These Are

Warnings

Two stories, however, should serve as warnings to careless motorists. They have to do with tags and licenses.

Governor Arnall is disturbed about the results of a traffic survey in Atlanta, showing the value of the staggered hours plan. Automobile statistics just bristled through that story, from start to finish.

old tag which shows the owner has paid his 1943 auto license fee.

Most of these offenders, apparently, are newcomers to the state. The tags of the states from which they came are still on their cars. There is a limited period in which an out-of-state tag is acceptable to Georgia authorities, as a guest privilege. But that is strictly limited. After that, the car owner is classed as a resident of this state, at least insofar as his car registration goes, and must buy a Georgia tag.

The Governor is sending a group of inspectors out to scour the state and make cases—which will carry appropriate penalties as prescribed by law, against all those who should have, but do not, Georgia tags for 1943.

Incidentally, a little private surveying done by the Governor betrays the fact that the majority of indicated trucks were, in proportion to numbers, worse offenders than passenger cars.

Another warning has to do with that $5 federal auto stamp which every car is supposed to have affixed, where it can easily be seen, since July 1. You can buy the stamps at the post office. Five dollars is the total cost for a year—if you buy the stamp and put it on your car before the inspectors catch you.

If a case is made against you for not having the stamp, the fine set by law is $25. So, if you neglect this little matter so long the inspectors catch you, your stamp will cost a total of $30. Five dollars stamp cost and $25 fine. It hardly seems worth it, to neglect buying the stamp, does it?

Incidentally, the stamp must be on your car. For the purpose of guilt, if it is not on the car, the fact you have bought it and have the stamp in your pocket, or some such place, is no defense. You are still guilty and subject to that fine.

Still Arent

An Automobile

Honest confession is good, they say. So, to complete this automobile column, here's an item of personal confession.

Since war and gas rationing, it has been my practice to drive the car only twice a week to the nearest trolley stop. There park the car and take the street car to town,

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

One-Horse NEW YORK, July 8.—You take my friend Joe a member of the numerous Spelvin tribe of Americans and a first cousin of George Spelvin, the All-American American. Joe is a one-horse grocer.

His little pitch is what the big chains of certain government agencies call a mom and pop store. Neither he nor his ever-loving had any formal training in bookkeeping and when they started up about 20 years ago they innocently figured that they would just sell groceries for a little more than the groceries cost them to buy and handle and call the difference profit. It was fairly simple at the start but not as simple as that because there were spoils and breakage and skips and dead-ends and those factors were shoved along to the paying customers and they got by all right.

They are still getting by but the light burns later and later these nights in their apartment above the store.

There is the social security, and the ration points and the black prices and the withholding tax and the employer's reports on compensation paid, and the unemployment insurance and employer's liability and a half-dozen kinds of insurance and their own income tax reports, both federal and state and no alike. And the gasoline ration stamps and the motor fuel license and the beer and oleomargarine licenses and the milk permit and the health department permit to handle meat. And, of course, the store accounts with the wholesalers and the accounts of the charge customers with mom and pop. And the laws.

They have hundreds of little transactions every day in which for a slip or because of ignorance they could be hauled before some board or other and made to explain and possibly be prosecuted and given a bad name as black marketeers betraying the brave lads at the front. Although it is hard to imagine anyone who could be less likely to betray than Joe and his ever-loving, considering that he was one of those brave lads himself, the last time and up in the line, too, and was rather badly hurt although not by the enemy—he wrenched something trying to pull a gun into position in a fight—and considering, too, the fact that their own kid, the oldest of three, is also one of those brave lads at the present writing.

They Have They have to what is required of them by old Sam's Treasury Department and the state treasury and something about the labor laws and keep up with fluctuations in rationing and tend the store and keep the stock replenished and keep things squared up at the bank. All told, the book-keeping and the keeping posted on what goes these days under the war emergency regulations amounts almost to an occupation in itself and that is where their overtime comes in, far into the night, even though they have had to take on the luxury of a part-time accountant to keep them out of jail and out of heck. He does the adding and subtracting and balancing and fills in some of the more complicated forms, but they keep the books.

It is a strange thing that Joe and the ever-loving have been paying social security for quite a turn of butchers, clerks and wagon boys, full time and part time, for years and years but haven't any social security themselves, except as they have been able to roll their own as the years went by. The store is their social security, the store and the back-log that they have to carry but they have had a fair share of medical and hospital bills and there was the cost of sending the oldest kid to military school so they wouldn't be very secure very long if they should decide to retire tomorrow.

Serious To people who started out keeping their accounts on a paper work in a couple of hours a couple of nights a week, the accumulated requirements now are a serious burden, especially after long days behind the counter and hustling around the markets and phoning all day. It leaves them very little spare time for any social doing and when they do get an evening that they can call their own they generally are too whipped to go anywhere or see anybody.

Maybe he and she are to go into one of the war factories they would do about as well, give or take a few dollars a week, as they are doing now and be shed of all the paper work and get time and a half for that evening time and the business corporation and do the worrying about the withholdings and the reports to the Treasury and all. But storekeeping is their business and it is a pretty good little store, after all, into which they have put their best years and they like to feel independent. But if you were to ask Joe and the ever-loving if they would start a store if they had it to do over today, the answer would be no. Too many headaches. Too much this and that and forms to fill out and too much never get to bed before midnight and up and back to the counter again by half-past seven.

picking up the family bus on the way home in the afternoon. Tuesday of this week circumstances necessitated driving the car all the way into town. It was the first time I'd taken such a trip in six months and it loomed as large, in anticipation, as a 300-mile trip to the coast used to in the old carefree, unrationed days.

So I drove in town Tuesday morning, left the car in a parking garage. Tuesday evening did I go to the garage and drive myself home again? I did not. Habit and absentmindedness got me. I followed the accustomed course and went home on the street car, not remembering the auto was up town until I was practically at the stop where I had to get off. Believe me, I remember to take the auto home on Wednesday evening.

ONE WORD MORE

(Editor's Note: During Ralph McGill's absence from Atlanta his column is being written by a number of his friends. Today his column is supplied by Harold Martin.)

MY SON! MY SON! "Daddy, come play with me." I guess I'm about as good a father as the next one. But when that insistent plea comes from beyond my newspaper, and the tugging of a grubby hand begins upon my arm, I feel a sense of failure. Never in life does imagination and inventiveness desert me so as when those words drag me back from Rabaul or Tunisia to home and parental responsibility.

I don't know what to play. "I know," I finally say, brightly, a note of fictitious eagerness in my voice. "You go hide and I will sit here and guess where you are. You say 'Ready' and I will say 'You are under mama's bed,' and if you really are under mama's bed, I win. If you are somewhere else, you win."

He thinks about this a moment. "No," he says stubbornly. "You will just sit here and read your paper and will not try to guess. I want to play airplane."

Now, if your children are the fragile, delicate type, playing airplane is a good game. All you have to do is seize the child by the middle of the back of his head and then lurch about the room with it, causing it to swoop and dive while you make noises like an airplane motor. My children are not the fragile and delicate type. I defy Man Mountain Dean to hold one high over his head and make it swoop and dive about the room without paralysis of the arm muscles and a case of vertigo that puts spots before the eyes as big as soap plates.

But, trying to be a good father, I play airplane so long as wind and muscle will endure. This time the spots before the eyes are even larger and more interesting than ever before. They are crimson, with purple polka dots. I sink into my chair, gasping, while my son, relinquishing his role as a B-19, waits impatiently. My hand starts stealing back toward the newspaper.

"Daddy," he says hastily, noting this movement. "Play with me some more." Playing bucking broncho with me. Playing bucking broncho is another one of those games that fathers invent when their children are young and light in weight. To play bucking broncho you kneel on the floor, a belt strapped around the chest as a surcingle for the rider to cling to. Then, by emulating the gyrations of an enraged cow-pony you seek, to toss the child, not too precipitously, on the floor.

So I play bucking broncho, my vertebrae cracking ominously under the weight of 60-odd pounds of small boy, until a sudden stab of pain testifies that the sacroiliac has jerked loose from its moorings. Then I crawl weakly to my chair. Through the swirling mists of fatigue I see him waiting, flushed and expectant, for the game to resume.

IN NATURE'S WONDERLAND "My son," I say weakly. "These parlor games are killing me. We shall go into the cool, quiet woods. There we shall observe the little birds and bees and ants and things. We shall adopt a game called Nature-lover."

He looks out the window. "It's wet out there," he says. "And I don't want to play a game called Nature-lover! I want to play bucking broncho some more."

"Over my dead body will we play bucking broncho some more," I say, and I do not speak in jest. "We will go into the woods to see the little birds and bees and ants and things. Or you will go back to your room and play by yourself."

So, we went into the woods. Now, I am not a botanist. My knowledge of zoology is feeble. But it is amazing what resources will come to the aid of a man desperately trying to divert the mind of his son from such games as "airplane" and "bucking broncho."

For other fathers who may find the information of value in similar situations I will set down here a brief chronology. It will be at once apparent that in the woods time passes swiftly, with a minimum of wear and tear on the physique. Most nature-loving can be done in a reclining position and the opportunities for catching cat-naps are not infrequent. The schedule:

3 to 3:15—Contemplation of a colony of ants found under an upturned rock. Reaching the scientific conclusion that the white ants become regular brown ants as soon as they get out from under the rock and get sunburned.

3:15 to 3:45—Investigation of a spider's egg.

3:45 to 5 p. m.—Observation of a terrapin. Debate as to whether it is a mama terrapin or a papa terrapin. No decision. Submerging terrapin in small stream in effort to make him poke his head out. Failure. Decision that terrapins can hold their breath under water longer than people can. Poking bits of grass under terrapin's shell in effort to tickle him and make him open up. No result. Decision that terrapins are not "goosey." Lying very quietly in the hope the terrapin will open up of his own volition. He does. Decision that terrapin stays shut up because he is very ugly. Watching terrapin griddle off into bushes. Decision that terrapin must be going home to supper.

5 to 5:30 p. m.—Probing, with help of dachshund, into cavern under old stump. Decision that if dragon ever lived there he must have moved.

5:30 to 5:40—Observation of gray lizard with bright blue tail. Wonder if lizard paints own tail. No decision.

5:40 to 5:45—Observation of tree-frog, who also observes us.

5:45 to 6:30—Observation of wren's nest in old shed near pasture fence. Decision baby wrens are hungry for their supper. Decision that we are, too.

Thus, covered with ticks and chigger-bites and a touch of poison oak, we wend our way homeward, he full of news of wonders seen to account to his big sister, me content in the knowledge I've been a good papa.

Safe again behind my paper, I listen to his report. "We saw a turtle," he says. "And a mama spider with a million babies."

"You like to play nature-lover, don't you?" I ask smugly.

"Yes," he says, tugging at my arm. "But now I wanta play bucking broncho some more."

The Peddler Can't Sell His Gadgets to Strangers If He Can't Make It Work

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

All Americans are agreed in desiring some safeguard against further butchery when this war ends. They hope other countries will adopt some form of Democracy instead of Communism or Fascism.

Whether that hope is realized will depend largely upon what other countries think of Democracy, and that will depend largely upon how well we make it work.

Does Democracy, as practiced in America, preserve the rights and dignity of the little people, and does it protect them from the tyranny of men who are trusted with power?

In Maryland a country town editor exposed a high-up politician who had used a state-owned car and perhaps 200 gallons of gasoline for a long pleasure trip with his family. The official was punished by OPA, but the editor was arrested and rushed to jail on a charge of libel.

In New York City the little Italian Mayor LaGuardia used his power in true Gestapo fashion. The mayor, who regards bingo as an invention of the Devil, had forbidden it in movie theaters.

Every city, as you know, has a code or set of rules governing the operation of theaters. Like such rules, they require many

Dudley Glass

Carlyle Fraser, president of the Chamber of Commerce, has asked of me—and several thousand other Atlantians—an opinion of "what are the three greatest needs for the welfare and progress of the Atlanta area and the state of Georgia."

Such a question is a question to be filled out while waiting on an order of hamburger with onions and a shot of java. It requires earnest thought and due consideration. Even lying awake at night. Which accounts for my delay in responding.

But my opinion—and this was asked, not volunteered—is as follows:

(1) A uniform price of 15 cents for standard brands of cigarettes. Consider how much gasoline is used in driving madly between Lakewood Heights and Buckhead, only to find no place where they can be had below 16 cents or two for 31.

(2) Street car tokens at least one inch square—and preferably square—with a hole you can stick your finger through. The rapacious power company has reaped a tremendous harvest because patrons, unable to distinguish by feeling and hesitating to delay the fare behind with one foot on the step, have dropped a dime into the slot, thereby losing 2-1/2 cents. I am told they have no recourse except by suit—and you know how slow the courts are.

(3) An ordinance—this may require state legislation or a constitutional amendment—taking up a collection for the boss on his birthday or a fellow servant departing for the armed forces a capital offense.

I could guess, Mr. Fraser, that on various occasions, such as birthdays, anniversaries or the time you shot your first 99 on your favorite golf course, some one of your numerous employees passed around a subscription blank inviting everybody from general manager to scrub woman to come across for love of the boss and "just to make it 100 per cent."

I am not familiar with your organization, except that I've always wanted one of your little red gasoline scooters—and you sent me one on a longago Christmas and then took it back—and I enjoy your company's monthly house organ, "Genuine, Paris Pups," which provides me many bright stories unsuitable for this column, but excellent for relating among intimate friends. So my assumption that you are the reluctant beneficiary of such subscriptions is perhaps unwarranted. I consider you as a type, and there is nothing personal involved.

No Hold-Up-But!

Most of us, ever since we landed our first job, have been afflicted with enthusiastic scoundrels who delighted in buying gifts for the boss—and not letting him forget who started the idea. I like my boss. I have liked nearly all of my bosses, and I have had many. But have always hated being held up at the point of a subscription blank and forced to sign on the dotted line—the sum to be subtracted from my weekly pay check.

There's no compulsion, of My Three Suggestions For Public Betterment; What Do You Think?

course. Nobody need give a penny if he doesn't feel like it. Says who?

The technique of these inspired pests is to present the subscription blank first to a top-salaried assistant who has been trying for six years to land the boss' job—hoping the boss be either promoted elsewhere or get run over by a truck. Naturally, he starts off with five bucks—or maybe ten—depending upon how much he hates the boss.

After that the subscription paper goes down the line. From top to bottom. The second and third big shots sign slyly and put down a figure. The smaller fry look at the figures and go for half that. Finally the office boys and the janitor, who is supposed to clean up the desks come across—from 50 cents to a quarter. Which means cutting out a movie and a couple of cokes.

There are many occasions, Mr. Carlyle, upon which both of us would gladly contribute to such a noble cause. But I am sure each of us would prefer to confer our benefactions in our own way. I might want in the case of a dear friend called to other duties—to make a gift either of a five-dollar necktie or a 35-cent dose of cyanide.

My idea—and I offer it for what it is worth, if anything—is that when an occasion arises for a demonstration of affection among employees of one of these big loving families a box with a slot in it should be installed in an accessible place—and nailed down—into which voluntary offerings might be dropped. Anonymously.

It probably would mean that the sum total would demand substitution of a bakery cake instead of the silver mounted suitcase.

But that would make the recipient feel better. God knows, he doesn't want a silver mounted suitcase paid for in part by the office boy. But how can he help himself?

Except by the enactment of this constitutional amendment I'm suggesting.

Maybe you've heard the one about the man who was being shaved by Giuseppe Tagliani, the Italian barber.

"What you think about Mussolini?" inquired the tonsorial artist.

"I agree with you, absolutely," said the customer, hastily.

"How do you know what I think?"

"I don't know—but you're holding the razor."

No, I don't wanna buy a duck, as Joe Penner's friends used to tell him. I don't desire a duck or ducks on any terms.

This is because a feminine reader wrote to offer me Donald and Dora, two highly cultured and affectionate ducks. I had received other offers before that.

So permit me to state that a few days ago I persuaded a friend who has a farm on a creek to accept our two ducks—and also the rooster whose clucking call resounded for a half-mile radius.

Now, we can sleep as late as we like. And so, we hope, can the neighbors.

Struck Paper Seeks Advice On Civil Suit

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 8.—(AP)—Publishing again, the Providence Journal Company sought its lawyers' advice today as to whether it could sue for civil damages as a result of a Typographical Union strike that caused the Evening Bulletin to miss publication yesterday.

The company announced that it had asked the attorneys whether suit could be brought under either the common law or the war labor disputes act.

The union, an independent, called the strike yesterday morning on the contention that their contract had been abrogated because of the payment of over-the-scale wages to certain members of the union.

Faced with a New England War Labor Board order to "return to work immediately," the strikers went back to their composing room machines last night in time to permit the company's morning newspaper, The Journal, to be published today.

Thus The Journal maintained unbroken a stretch of 114 years of continuous publication. The one-day suspension of the Bulletin was its first in 80 years.

The Ration Counter...

Your questions about all phases of the various rationing programs will be answered authoritatively by the Ration Counter. Telephone your questions to WAInut 3876 between the hours of 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. Inquiries by mail must be accompanied by a self-addressed stamped envelope. They should be addressed to the Ration Counter, care The Constitution, Atlanta.

Those of you who have been bemoaning the passing of the luscious fruit sundaes which dotted drugstore billboards during pre-war days in tempting profusion, may take heart. OPA yesterday allowed these sundaes to take a new lease on life.

All fountain fruit; that is, fruit used primarily for toppings and in the manufacture of ice cream, have been subtracted from the ration list.

What To Do If You Move After Filing for Ration Book

In the fervor of wartime living, many persons who believe themselves pretty well settled suddenly find themselves uprooted and forced to set up housekeeping all over again.

One Atlanta housewife found herself in this predicament just the other day. Since she had no inkling that she would soon be moving when applications for ration book 3 were filed, she had, of course, mailed hers in from her old address.

Yesterday she was puzzled as to just what she should do about getting her book. "My postman told me that it would not be forwarded, so what should I do?"

After August 1, she should take the stub she tore from her original application to her county rationing board, where a check will be instigated for the book and one issued to her.

If You Received 2 Ration Books, Mail One to District OPA Office

John Moore, regional issuance manager for war ration book 3, yesterday announced further instructions for persons who, by mistake, received two new ration books instead of the one they're entitled to.

The extra book should be mailed to the district OPA office from which it was issued, together with a brief note containing the name of the head of the family and the serial numbers of all the books issued on that particular application which the family kept.

It is not necessary to wait until August 1 to mail in these duplicate books; the matter should be taken care of right away.

Information about fuel oil rationing and basic "D" gasoline ration books was released yesterday by H. H. McPherson, executive officer of the Fulton county rationing board.

How To Renew Basic "D" Books For Motorcycles, 3-Wheeled Vehicles

All owners of motorcycles, which include three-wheeled vehicles, should go to the local war price and rationing boards to secure R-570, application for basic "D" books, which expire July 22, 1943," he announced.

"There forms must be mailed to the local board properly completed, together with the back cover of the original basic "D" book. The board will then mail the applicant a new "D" book for the current year, July 22, 1943, through July 21, 1944.

"The public," he continued, "is warned not to apply for the basic "A" gasoline ration books at this time, as the present "A" books do not expire until November 22 of this year.

Users of Fuel Oil Told To Send in Renewal Applications

"Users of fuel oil to heat homes are warned by the local war price and rationing board to send in their renewal applications, which have been in the past 30 days, at once as OPA desires that they secure their stamps and order the oil needed during the summer, because there is a chance that the oil will not be available during the coming winter," McPherson urged.

Farmers who use fuel oil to maintain brooders, or any other type of implement used in raising poultry, livestock or agricultural products, are now eligible for rations regardless of when they bought the implements, OPA announced yesterday.

Gallup Poll Reveals: Public Opposes 'Make-Work'

By GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 8.—The new ukase of James C. Petrillo, head of the musician's union, to stop permanently the making of electrical transcriptions for radio broadcasting, raises what is probably the fundamental labor issue of our time—namely, the right asserted by unions to "make work" for their members.

Organized labor has been concerned for years over alleged monopolistic practices by business, but today the general public is growing increasingly concerned over what it considers monopolistic tendencies on the part of labor. Whatever merits the union argument for make-work policies may have, that argument has not been presented in a way to convince the public.

As a result the great majority of Americans oppose the principle that employers, in accordance with union rules, should hire more men than are actually needed to perform a given job. A nation-wide survey of sentiment discloses that the vote against union make-work policies is approximately 7 to 3. National opinion was sounded by a coast-to-coast staff of field interviewers for the Institute on the following issue:

"Some labor unions make jobs for their members by requiring employers to hire more men than are actually needed to do a particular job. The unions say this is necessary in order to give work to all their members. Do you think a law should be passed prohibiting this practice?"

The vote is:

Good Morning

"HEAVEN BROKE IN."

One of my favorite writers is F. T. L. in the Baptist Times, London. I was reading one of his essays the other night, in the issue of June 10, and came upon the arresting phrase, "Heaven broke in." He was discussing the Day of Pentecost. And he put it as powerfully as I have anywhere seen it—"Heaven broke in."

There are many events in the first century to which we must give more than mere historic attention. They are more than historic. Occurring in time, they embody the timeless. Set in a special scene, they relate to the whole unfolding drama of human life. Related by men, they are discovered to relate to God.

Referring again to F. T. L.'s article, let us reflect for a moment on that Day of Pentecost. Nothing like this happened to the disciples of Plato or Aristotle. But to a little band of unlearned men and women in Jerusalem something came which had never been seen in more exalted parts of the Roman Empire. "Heaven broke in."

Now what are some of the facts of that great day when "Heaven broke in?" It was in fulfillment of a promise. Jesus had said, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."

It issued in a mighty witness, inspiring Peter's challenging sermon: "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we are all witnesses." It issued further in a call to repentance: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the Holy Ghost." It created a conquering fellowship, marked by joy, sharing, praise, and the daily addition of "those that were being saved."

Even to state these bare facts in this cursory manner is to report the most dynamic thing that ever happened. It was dynamic socially as well as individually, and like every power with which the Bible is concerned, its origin was in God. "Heaven broke in!"

Well, when we come to carefully think of it, Heaven has been breaking in throughout the centuries. How else can you explain Abraham, Joseph, Moses, Daniel, John the Baptist, the Virgin Birth, the Boy at 12 in the Temple, the miracles, Calvary, Olivet? And to follow the theme onward through the centuries, how can you explain Stephen, Paul, Barnabas, Savaonaria, Chrysostom, Francis of Assisi, Luther, Whitefield, Wesley, Huss, Carey, Morrison, Livingstone—how else can you explain such men and such movements except to say, "Heaven broke in!"

Anyone who knows the history of Christianity can point again and again to outpourings of Divine power. There have been clever men in the Church of the Living God, but cleverness, heroism, not even consecration can, left to themselves, explain the remarkable witness of Christianity through the centuries. You might as well seek to explain the tides by reference to the pebbles on the shore, when the true explanation is up yonder in the mysteries of sun and moon. Far above the earthly scene is the explanation of the tides that rush through human souls—flood-tide visitations from Heaven which lift us out of

Gun Report Excites White House Offices

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(AP)—A shot sounded in the White House offices today.

It nicked the plaster and made a hole in the wall of a downstairs corridor without injuring anyone. One of the soldier guards at the White House was taking a riot gun away to be cleaned and inspected and had removed the magazine but not the one cartridge left in the chamber. The remaining one was fired accidentally, and created a moment of extreme excitement.

the shadows and bear us onward and upward.

And in every such hour of blessings, we may well say with F. T. L., "Heaven broke in." It is God's way. "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord." Selah.

Land Bank Loans Still Available

Through the federal land banks acting as agents for the land bank commissioner, land bank commissioner loans will continue to be made available to farmers, according to a statement made yesterday by B. F. Wilson, secretary-treasurer of the National Farm Loan Association serving Fulton, DeKalb, Gwinnett, Rockdale, Fayette and Clayton counties.

These loans, which may not exceed $7,500, are usually made for 10 to 20 years upon security of first and second mortgages on farms. President Roosevelt recently signed the act authorizing the making of the loans for an additional period of two years.

'Equal Rights' Boy Refugee Bill Passage Is Now Major Forecast Here In U. S. Army

Baltimore Portia Urges Georgia Women To Back Measure.

Passage of the proposed constitutional amendment which would give equal rights to women was predicted here yesterday by Miss Helen Brown, president of the Woman's Bar Association of Baltimore.

"The bill has more than a good chance to get through congress," Miss Brown said during a chat at the Baltimore hotel with Miss Daphne Roberts, immediate past president of the Georgia Association of Women Lawyers.

The amendment is designed to give women equal rights whether in the home, business, industry or courts. It is modeled after the woman's suffrage bill, Miss Brown said.

"As things stand now, legally, there is no such thing as a woman," Miss Brown asserted. "The constitution refers only to persons and citizens. The equal rights bill would change that."

Miss Brown is in Atlanta to attend a luncheon in her honor at 1 p. m. Saturday in the Henry Grand hotel, and to urge the women of Georgia to back the proposed amendment.

She said there should be no discrimination against women, particularly those doing wartime work.

"In some states," Miss Brown asserted, "it is unlawful for women to work at night. Fortunately, however, some of the states have set aside that law for the duration. We want to keep it that way."

Another objective of the national association, Miss Brown said, is to make it legal for women to serve on juries in all states. At present, she said, only half of the states give women that right.

21,995,000 Acres in Cotton for 1943

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(AP)—The Agriculture Department reported today that cotton in cultivation on July 1 totaled 21,995,000 acres, or 5.6 per cent less than the 23,302,000 acres in cultivation a year ago.

The average area in cultivation on July 1 in the ten years, 1932-41, was 29,508,000 acres.

The average abandonment of acreage from July 1 to harvest in the ten years 1932-42 was 2.0 per cent of the acreage in cultivation. Should abandonment this year equal the 10-year average, an acreage of 21,577,000 would be indicated for harvest.

Production on the 22,660,000 acres harvested to date was 12,624,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight and the yield was 27.25 pounds per acre. The average production in the ten years, 1931-40, was 13,109,000 bales and the yield was 21.50 pounds per acre.

The department made no estimate today of indicated production for this year as it is forbidden by law to issue its first production estimate of the season before August each year.

3 Florida Bridges May Become Toll-Free

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 8.—(AP)—Developments here and in Washington today may lead to removal of tolls from three major bridges in the state's strategic highway system, leaving only the Overseas highway to Key West on which a toll will be charged.

There are a few toll bridges on secondary roads.

In Washington, congress cleared a bill for the President's signature that would allow use of federal highway funds in purchasing Gandy bridges and Davis causeway in the Tampa-St. Petersburg area, and in Tallahassee the state supreme court validated issuance of $1,450,000 of revenue bonds by Escambia county to buy and free the Pensacola Bay bridge.

Regents Move To Eliminate Over-Staffing

Intra-System Shifting of Teachers To Apply in Future.

To prevent over-staffing of faculties in one institution and under-staffing in another, teachers in the University System of Georgia in the future will be subject to transfer from one college to another, the Board of Regents decided yesterday.

Teacher contracts for the new year include an agreement subjecting them to intra-system transfer.

This will permit the board to shift teachers from an institution whose student body has shown a sharp decrease since the teachers were employed. Adjustments in salaries will be made to prevent the teacher from losing in the transfer, Regent Sandy Beaver said.

Requests for establishment of a dental hygiene school and nursing schools at the Georgia Evening college were heard by the board, and referred to Chancellor S. V. Sanford and President George Sparks of the Evening college for further study.

The Georgia Dental association said there is not a place in the south in which such training for dental hygienists can be received and given recognition by the American Dental association.

The nursing association asked that federal funds be obtained to set up a nursing education school at the Georgia Evening college such as is now given at hospitals. The college would train 150 beginners each quarter and receive an income of $20,000 per year, a nursing association spokesman said.

School Heads Scrap Over NYA Remains

A scrap over the remains of the National Youth Administration in Georgia developed yesterday between the State University System and the State Department of Education.

The board of regents, meeting here, authorized Chancellor S. V. Sanford to proceed at once to obtain NYA equipment in Georgia for use in developing the industrial arts program at state colleges.

State Superintendent of Schools M. D. Collins announced earlier in the week the department would attempt to secure the equipment to strengthen the vocational training program carried on by the common schools.

Advised of the regents' action, Collins said he would not recede from his original plan for the NYA property. He added, however, that he would have no objection to some of it being shared with the University System if the State Board of Education decided this would assure its most beneficial use.

Dr. Sanford told the regents the vocational division is "anxious to grab the whole thing while we need it." He added, "I want to fight as I never fought in my life to get this."

NYA buildings and equipment on University System property at the West Georgia College at Carrollton were valued by the chancellor at $250,000. He said he wanted the University System to acquire this property and also obtain NYA equipment for the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia.

The University System lost $192,000 in federal funds when NYA was abolished, Sanford said.

Joked that "I guess you'll be getting mother before you get me—I'm 4-F."

Most of the housewives don't give much thought as to what it's all for, but Mrs. Coleman said the business women she had questioned the night before were all expecting to be drafted and were even picking the branch of service they'd like to be in.

"Where they have two skills, they asked me to list one only," Mrs. Coleman said, "so that if they are ever drafted they'll be given the type of job they like."

At Mrs. W. E. Bird's house, at 542 Mayson avenue, five-year-old Barbara was sitting on the front porch eating a jelly sandwich.

"Is mother home," Mrs. Van Houten queried.

The child carefully deposited her sandwich on the floor and ran inside to yell—"Mom! Mom! Mom!"

Her hair rolled up on bobby pins and wearing a house dress and socks, Mrs. Bird came to the door and apologized as she invited the lady warden in. "My two children both have birthdays today," she laughed, "and we're getting ready for a party. Everything's in a mess, but you just can't get help any more. I've got a girl promised to come and iron Friday, but I won't believe it till I see her."

Mrs. Van Houten explained her visit and, after penciling Mrs. Bird's answers to the questions, crossed the lawn to the grey shingle house next door.

Here the three small daughters of Mrs. Hugh Waller were engaged, wrapping presents for the double birthday party that was to come off at the Bird home.

"Are they going to draft us?" Miss Waller asked, then laughed—"Well, I guess I've got enough exemptions, I've a 12-year-old at camp as well as these three, and they really keep my hands full."

Dr. Truett Speaks on Message of Burdens

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.
Pastor, Druid Hills Baptist Church.

The Bible's threefold message on "What to do with our burdens," was the theme of Dr. George W. Truett yesterday morning's sermon at Druid Hills Baptist church. When those from outside Atlanta were asked to stand in the large audience, several hundred stood, representing more than 20 counties throughout Georgia.

Dr. Truett announced he would preach this morning on "The Ministry of Sorrow," a subject upon which many have asked him to preach since his arrival in Atlanta.

"I am impressed," said Dr. Truett, "by these requests, and I shall, the Lord willing, undertake to bring some word on this altogether vital and immediate matter at the Friday morning service."

"What to do with our burdens," said Dr. Truett, "is too big a question for any man on this earth, and we need not to be bothered about seeking among arms of flesh for the answer. God has given it all and final in His Book, and I ask you to look now at the three-fold message of the Bible on this great subject."

Three Passages.

"Here are the three passages: 'For every man shall bear his own burden'; 'Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ'; and 'Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee'.

The first two passages are found in Galatians, the sixth chapter, and the third passage is found in Psalms 55:22.

"Now, what do these passages from God's Holy Word say to our hearts? First, our burdens are non-transferable—'Every man shall bear his own burden.' Every life is isolated and separated and segregated from every other life. To a remarkable degree every man is lived alone. No man can perform your duty for you. 'To every man his work,' said the Master.

"There is a program for you to follow—God's program for your life. There is a task for you to face. There is a life for you to live. Nobody can repent of sin for you, nor can anybody believe on Christ for you, nor can anybody make answer at the judgment bar of God for you. We must everyone give an account of himself unto God.

"There is to be no hiding behind others, or behind some organization. God sees the individual, deals directly with the individual, and He has so created us that each individual is competent to deal directly with God. Now the meaning of this forever solemn truth is clear—we must, each of us, accept our personal responsibility before God. Whether anybody else does right or not, I must do right, you must do right, as in the sight of God. 'Every man shall bear his own burden.'"

Gives Illustration.

"A tremendous truth is here disclosed. I cannot subscribe to something in the mass that I cannot subscribe to as an individual. An illustration comes to mind of a great business man in America who, some years ago, resigned from three directorships. Pressed for his reason, he quietly replied: 'You are asking me to approve something for this corporation and the others that I would not approve if I owned all the stock. I am responsible to God for my every act and must, therefore, be relieved of doing something as a director that I would not do as an individual.'"

"Again, the Bible teaches that we are to bear one another's burdens, which clearly means that there are community burdens which we are to bear, which we are to share, and the manner in which we bear such burdens will reveal that we are Christ's people. Go back now, and see the setting of this particular verse. Paul says in the preceding verse: 'Brethren, if a man be overtaken with a fault, ye who are spiritual restore such a one, in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.'"

"There you have it. The original text here employs the figure of a dislocated member of the body, as, for example, an arm that is out of joint. We are to deal tenderly and promptly with such dislocation. We are plainly summoned in this passage to go out and give ourselves to recover men and women who in some way or another are dislocated in the world about us. We are not to denounce them, but to help them. Right here, my friends, we have the vital work of the gospel of Christ in meeting and helping every hurt of humanity in all the world."

DONOR ALSO BENEFITS.

An old gentleman in southwest England is a constant donor to the Army Blood Supply Depot, London reports. This particular benefactor of the mobile blood bank unit gets a double benefit from his activities. He suffers from high blood pressure, and formerly he had to pay a fee to a physician regularly to be bled.

Lawless-Beckwith Marriage Set for Evening of August 11

By SALLY FORTH.

WHEN WEDDING BELLS ring for Jane Lawless and Captain Jack Beckwith on Wednesday, August 11, Jane will present a striking picture in her white satin wedding gown which will set off to distinct advantage her brunet beauty and deep summer tan. The Sacred Heart church will form the setting for the ceremony, which will be brilliantly solemnized at 7 o'clock in the evening, with Father Leo Ziebarth officiating.

Jane has chosen Jack's sister, Bethany Anne Beckwith, of Miami, as her maid of honor, and Beverly Adams (Mrs. Nat) Turnbull will serve as matron of honor. Her bridesmaids will include Betty Ferguson and Joyce Estes. Joyce, who now hails from Miami, once lived in Atlanta and will receive a royal welcome when she arrives for the wedding. Jack's young nieces, Joy and "Bubbles" Rockefeller, of Bronxville, N. Y., have been cast in the roles of junior bridesmaids. They are the lovely young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Rockefeller.

Dr. J. Holden Beckwith, of Miami, will serve as his son's best man, and Jack has chosen Lieutenant Nat Turnbull, Captain Frederick Frink, of Miami, and Lieutenant John Grinnam, of Norwalk, Conn., as his groomsmen.

Captain William Neelson, Major James K. McClintock, of Washington, D. C.; Lieutenant George J. Coleman and Captain George Smathers, of Miami, and Captain Alex Little will serve as ushers.

In lieu of a wedding bouquet, Jane will carry the prayer book used by the former Jane Sharp when she became the bride of Captain C. J. McLaughlin several months ago. The prayer book will form the "something borrowed" in her wedding ensemble, and for "something old" she will use the lace handkerchief which Mrs. E. D. Dunbar made for her niece, the former Beverly Adams, when she was married to Lieutenant Nat Turnbull.

Jane and Jack have already received a number of handsome wedding gifts, most prized among which, perhaps, is the family silver presented them by Jane's grandmother, Mrs. W. J. Stoddard. Being the only grandchild on her maternal side, Jane felt her to all of her grandmother's silver, which includes a complete chest of flat silver in the lovely "Candlestick" pattern, a beautiful punch bowl and the cups to match, and an exquisite silver service.

RALPH MCGILL, executive editor of The Constitution, bids fair to be the most popular man in England with the ladies. And for a very good reason.

You see, he and Mary Elizabeth (Mrs. McGill) spent a few days in Washington before he left for battle-scarred Britain. While there Evie (Mrs. Chip) Robert suggested that Ralph might "grease the wheels of England," so to speak, with lipstick for the ladies.

Delighted with this suggestion, but not quite sure of himself on this subject, Ralph appealed to Mary Elizabeth to shop for him. So she and the fashion editor of one of the leading Washington newspapers bought an assortment of colors of lipsticks, which with a few lemons (which are also very scarce in England) filled the extra space in Ralph's luggage.

Before taking off, Ralph received letters from Lord Beaverbrook and many of the high officials of the British army, navy and air force, telling him of plans for his visit. Mary Elizabeth tried to imagine just what shade of lipstick each of the wives of these particular gentlemen would require, and of course she is anxious to hear whether or not her guesses were correct.

Ralph was advised before he left that his baggage would be limited to 40 pounds, so the English ladies should really appreciate the lipsticks which took up some of those precious pounds of his luggage allotment.

LA TRELLE OTWELL, of Cumming, and her fiancé, Courtney Clark Brooks, of Atlanta, have chosen Saturday, August 7, as the date for their marriage because it marks the birthday anniversary of La Trelle's father, Roy P. Otwell. The nuptials will take place at an evening ceremony at the First Baptist church of Cumming.

La Trelle will follow the time-honored bridal traditions in assembling her wedding attire. Her wedding gown and veil will be "something new," while a pearl and diamond-studded lavalliere which her father gave to her mother, who wore it on her wedding day, will be "something old." For "something borrowed," La Trelle will wear the lace hose worn by her great-aunt, Mrs. Fred D. Estes, of Gainesville, when she was a bride 40 years ago. "Something blue" will be a pair of blue satin garters given the future bride by her sister, Rebecca. And for luck she will wear in her shoe a six-pence belonging to her maternal grandmother, Mrs. B. F. Bennett, who wore it as a lucky omen when she became a bride and which has since been worn by many brides in her family.

Mrs. Thomas Weds Cpl. H. G. Tidrick

Interest centers in the announcement made today by Mrs. R. W. Laue, of the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Laue Thomas, to Corporal Hartzell George Tidrick, of Conley, Ga., son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Tidrick, of Dillonville, Ohio.

The ceremony took place on Wednesday evening at the home of the bride on Sixteenth street with Rev. James W. Moore, assistant pastor of St. Mark Methodist church, officiating in the presence of only members of the family.

Miss Sara Lane, as maid of honor, and Corporal Edward West, of Conley, as best man, were the only attendants. The bride was becomingly gowned in a model of navy blue sheer and her flowers were gardenias.

The couple will reside for the present at 32 Sixteenth street.

Miss Warmack Weds Reece W. Mitchell.

CHATSORTH, Ga., July 8.—Mr. and Mrs. Edd Warmack, of Chatsworth, announce the recent marriage of their daughter, Miss Carrie Louise Warmack, to Reece W. Mitchell, of Atlanta. The marriage was solemnized June 19 at the home of the Rev. Thomas F. Harvey, pastor of the Gordon Street Baptist church, of Atlanta.

The bride wore a navy blue ensemble with navy and white accessories. Her flowers were purple-throated orchids.

The couple will reside in Atlanta where Mr. Mitchell is connected with the War Department.

'How Met My Husband'---

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of stories by Sally Firth about how prominent Atlanta couples met each other. The series was inspired by the recent poll conducted by the magazine, Parade, on how Mr. and Mrs. America met. The poll resulted as follows: 29% through friends; 21% at a party; 16% at work; 11% at school; 5% on vacation; 4% as neighbors; 4% as pick-ups; 3% at church, and 1% miscellaneous.

By SALLY FORTH.

"What an odd name! I don't think I'll ever be able to remember it," observed Miss Laura Boyd, of Savannah, after her introduction to a young Johns Hopkins student, William Shallenberger, back in 1905.

The introduction, it seems, took place in Baltimore where Miss Boyd, en route to New York, stopped to visit her brother, Montague Boyd, who was also a student at Johns Hopkins. Montague asked his fellow student, Bill Shallenberger, to go with him to the train to meet his sister, who was to visit Mrs. Henry McElerey, the daughter of Maryland's former Governor Bradford, over night.

The next day Miss Boyd went on to New York, and she did not see the gentleman with the peculiar name again until several years later when her brother brought him home as his guest during Easter vacation. Before the two boys arrived, she was constantly asking her mother, the name of their expected guest. And each time her reaction was the same—to save her life she could not remember that name!

Finally she gave up trying and announced that she would just call him Bill. And he has been Bill to her ever since.

For on that visit Miss Boyd and her brother's schoolmate really became acquainted. Soon afterwards she went to Baltimore to continue her study of music (in which she is exceptionally gifted) at Peabody Institute. And then she began to see quite a lot of the young Johns Hopkins doctor. Eventually the friendship blossomed into a romance, and she promised to take the name she couldn't remember as her own.

Mrs. Shallenberger recalls that she and Bill were engaged for almost four years before they were married, for that was the day of long engagements. Which is in direct contrast to the present-day trend of meeting, becoming betrothed, and being married, all in the space of a few weeks.

Dr. Shallenberger is a native of Edgewood, Pa., but because his lovely bride preferred to live in the south, he established residence in Atlanta and became one of the city's leading and most beloved physicians.

"In fact," says Mrs. Shallenberger, "he is now as devoted to the south as I, and claims to be a better southerner."

On the seventh of last month, the Shallenbergers celebrated their thirtieth wedding anniversary, so Mrs. Shallenberger has had lots of time to become accustomed to the name she couldn't remember.

MRS. WILLIAM F. SHALLENBERGER.

acted as best man. White slipper satin fashioned the bride's gown. The long fitted bodice was made with a heart-shaped neckline and full puffed sleeves. The skirt of net posed over satin flared into a train. Her fingertip veil of net was caught to her hair with a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a white Bible topped with a cluster of purple-throated orchids.

Mrs. Ross, mother of the bride, wore white embroidered jersey and white accessories, with a shoulder spray of pink roses. Mrs. S. W. Saggus, mother of the groom, wore beige eyelet jersey and luggage tan accessories with a shoulder bouquet of talisman roses.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Ross were hosts at a reception for the bride and the bride couple. Miss Lucia Rooney presided over the bride's book and those assisting were Mrs. K. P. McClung, Mrs. Frank Hull Jr., Miss Dorothy Donaldson and Miss Charmie de Moran.

Mr. Saggus and his bride left for a brief wedding trip, after which they will reside in Decatur. For traveling Mrs. Saggus chose a two-piece suit of navy sheer with navy accessories and a shoulder cluster of orchids.

Miss Anne Ross, Mr. Saggus Wed at Decatur Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Anne Winstead Ross and Samuel Heyward Saggus, of Decatur, was solemnized last evening at 6 o'clock at the Patillo Memorial Methodist church, with the pastor, Rev. S. D. Cherry, officiating. Miss Lucile Bush, organist, presented a program of music.

Palm and ferns formed the background for the altar. Baskets of white gladioli and swainsworts interspersed with branched candelabra holding burning white tapers completed the decorations.

The ushers included Paul Turner and Lieutenant R. F. Garvin. Mrs. Paul Turner served as matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Sue Ross and Mrs. Fred Linn. They wore identical gowns of blue marquisette over matching taffeta, and carried nosegays of pink flowers tied with pink satin ribbons.

Little Misses Maureen Turner and Deanna Cary were flower girls. Their frocks were of pink organdy designed like those of the other attendants and they carried miniature nosegays of pastel flowers.

The lovely young bride was given in marriage by her father, Francis A. Ross, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his uncle, J. T. King Jr., who

Mrs. Ike Eisenhower Active In War Work on Home Front

WASHINGTON.—Responsibility weighs heavily on the shoulders of little Mamie Doud Eisenhower.

As the wife of an American commanding general, she is strict with herself to maintain a corresponding position of serious dignity and reserve. Her share on the home front is to help inspire confidence in the family name.

"So many American mothers and wives feel that the fate of their loved ones is in my husband's hands," she reminds, referring to our forces in the North African theater. "I know just how they feel."

With her husband on the fighting front and their only son headed that way, Mrs. Eisenhower literally "understands" the meaning of such personal sacrifice. Young John Sheldon Eisenhower, following in his father's footsteps, will graduate from West Point next spring.

Mrs. Eisenhower lives alone quietly in their attractive Washington apartment. Her engagements, however, are devoted mainly to war work on the home front. She has been very active in the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, and is a popular hostess at the Washington unit of the Stage Door Canteen. Red Cross activities, likewise, have taken much of her time. In fact, the general's wife really overworked, trying to do "her part" and in this humid Washington summer, she's been forced to take a brief leave from her volunteer services.

"But I'll be back at it soon," she assures with characteristic determination.

A clever and attractive personality, Mrs. Eisenhower is a pretty package of morale for a service entertainment. She stands small and trim, wearing her dark hair smooth with a cluster of curly bangs. A delightful sense of humor accents her conversation.

Mrs. Eisenhower is an amiable woman, with a natural warmth. She loves friends, as does her husband, and in happier days their home was a popular center, called the Club Eisenhower.

"On Sunday afternoons, the folks flocked in," she recalled.

"Ike would rather give somebody a fried egg at home than to go out some place."

Mamie Doud was born in Iowa, the daughter of a well-to-do livestock dealer. When she was seven, her family moved from Cedar Rapids to Colorado. As a girl, she had little contact with Army life, but the Douds ancestors fought both in the Civil and Revolutionary wars.

The former Mamie Doud was only 18, when, by chance, she met the Texas-born lieutenant who was to make history in World War II. She had accompanied her parents and a neighbor couple to a Texas army post, and an invitation to dine in the officers' quarters brought the introduction.

Popular Miss Doud already had another date in town after dinner, but the persistent Eisenhower was not to be deterred, and in just two months, she says that "the gold buttons had won." Marriage followed the next spring.

"As a girl, I liked to dance, and Ike liked athletics," Mrs. Eisenhower observed. "So, we just compromised and stayed at home."

Mrs. Eisenhower, fortunately, has that knack for making their home a veritable oasis from the press of official worries. There is that pleasant atmosphere, and the interior is both attractive and functional, with handsome antiques from both sides of the family.

Just as Commander Butcher serves as naval aide to General Eisenhower, Mrs. Butcher lives in the apartment unit right next to Mrs. Eisenhower. They share their up and downs together, and exchange frequent news notes. Fortunately, the mail service is good, and they hear often from their husbands. Victory will have an added meaning for these two war widows.

The last few days in the country were very delightful. Judge and Mrs. Samuel Rosenman have taken a house not very far away from us this summer, and we enjoyed going up a very steep hill to pay them a call one afternoon, and I think they have one of the most beautiful views from their terrace in Dutchess county.

Some day I am going to live a life of leisure, but so far I never find that I do half the things I want to do in a day. I am here in the country, and I have not mentioned that if someone were to ask me what I was doing, I should have to say, practically nothing! Nevertheless, the fact remains that the mail can take considerable time every day, and reading the papers and enjoying what youthful guests turn up, and occasionally talking to a few adults who appear, as well, with just a little reading thrown in, seems to fill a day.

Of course, I have not mentioned that we swim and lie in the sun every day and that we do take a little exercise and see some of our neighbors, either on foot or on a bicycle. But I always wonder where the time goes and why it is so late at night when I finally go to bed!

Tomorrow, on the 8th of July, the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor will celebrate its 25th birthday. It is interesting to realize that this bureau was established in 1918, when the Department of Labor was only five years old. It was then a temporary "women in industry service," which was created to meet the need for obtaining women to fill the jobs vacated by men who had been drafted.

Miss Mary Anderson succeeded Miss Mary Van Kleeck as the first director in August, 1918, and the service became a permanent agency act of congress in June, 1920. Labor bodies and women's organizations and agencies concerned with social progress worked hard to obtain this bureau which was "to investigate and report on all matters concerning the employment of women, to formulate policies and standards to promote women's welfare, to improve their working conditions, to increase their efficiency, and so develop opportunities for their possible employment."

Everyone who wants to know anything about women in industry today turns to Mary Anderson and this bureau. It has become an important and active agency and all we can do is to wish it equal success for the many years which lie ahead.

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:

I imagine my case is different from the others. I am a young married woman with no children, but whose life is confined to the house and an almost desperate. My husband seems to never care whether I get to go any place or not. He provides no way for me to go places and gets mad if I ask him to get me a way to go places now and then. I have some nice friends and relatives in a near-by town. Do you think it would be a dishonor for me to go to this town and see them once in a while? I have been told that for a woman to walk would be shameful. I have always lived a clean life and am considered very attractive to most people. When going to school I walked this far and enjoyed it very much. My financial condition will not permit me to arrange a way of transportation. I have a few neighbors but none of them have any interest in walking. I am not the type who wishes to just stay on the job but just to get away every now and then. Sometimes I think a movie would help me so much.

MRS. J. N.

I don't know where you have been all these years to have the idea that it was shameful for a woman to walk. Of course, because of the danger. I wouldn't advise walking at night, but the idea that walking to visit friends is shameful, is too much to comprehend. There is no reason for you to sit at home like a hermit because your husband won't arrange for you to go anywhere. I don't think it's much to his credit to act this way, but since man is the most unpredictable person on earth there can be no sensible reason why he is acting this way. He is no doubt selfish, stubborn, and indifferent. Stop asking him to provide a way for you and go when and where you wish. You are not in prison and you are a free citizen, or at least you have that right, and your state is of your own making. You have brought it all upon yourself. Visit friends, invite friends in to see you and go to the movies any time you wish. And ignore your husband for a while and perhaps he will realize that he is not as important in your life as he thinks.

USELESS TO WORRY ABOUT OTHER GIRLS

Dear Dixie:

I am 16 and he is 24 and I love him very much. He tells me that he loves me, and he wants me to marry him after the war. But here is my problem. I think that there is another girl he loves more than he does me, but I don't love anyone but him. Everyone thinks he is so attractive. He was home on a furlough last week and all my friends tried to attract his attention. Two or three of them even want to write him. I realize that all soldiers like to get mail from anyone, but do you think it would be all right for them to write him? He is coming home again and I am afraid for him to come, because of these girls. What do you think I should do? Hurry with the answer.

A YOUNG GIRL IN LOVE.

If he has asked you to marry him, he must love you, so don't worry about the other girl. If these other girls want to write him, it really should not concern you, it's whether he will be interested enough to answer them is the point. If you are afraid of these girls don't let them know the soldier is coming. Keep him to yourself and don't expose him to anyone whom you might think would steal your thunder. If he has met these girls before and prefers you, there is nothing for you to worry about. If you begin worrying about his loving another girl, you won't have full command of yourself and will act unnatural, and will not be the person whom he admires.

Fashion Note

Looking perfectly stunning at the Beachcomber's the other evening, Ida Lupino, chose a black jersey dress with reed-slim skirt (gathered slightly at the front) and deep-square-neckline fitted bodice with long sleeves. Exciting accent was the fresh cadidum leaf (pale green with purple tint and veins) pinned to her dress with an emethyst cabishon surrounded with tiny diamonds. Black accessories completed the ensemble.

Victory Gardening Makes Weight Control Easier

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you have a victory garden, it's easier to control your weight—not that the weeding keeps you slim, although the exercise is all to the good! But a garden right in your own back yard does assure you of something to eat besides the rationed foods and the unrefined and fattening starches.

The market situation being what it is, there is some difficulty in getting all the fresh vegetables and fruits you need, and you've stopped even counting on meat. You have to fill up on something. So if you are entirely dependent on what you can buy, you are quite apt to turn to bread and more bread and sweets.

Something's got to be done about it. If you haven't started your garden, it's a little late for that in some sections for some of the vegetables you should have in it. But you can stick to the principles of nutrition and that will keep your menus balanced without boosting the calories.

Make sure the foods you buy in the place of the ones you can't get are nutritional substitutes. Bread and butter do not take the place of meat, nor sweets the place of fruits and vegetables.

For your protein sources, use more eggs, milk and cheese and have fish and chicken more often. If you can afford it, have two eggs every day, one for breakfast and another for lunch. And this summer, while milk is plentiful, have two or three glasses a day.

All kinds of greens, both for salads and cooking, are abundant now. Have a green leafy salad at least once a day and learn to like the cooked greens you haven't been in the habit of eating. They are rich in vitamin A and iron. For a tasty and satisfying luncheon dish, have a tossed green salad with sliced, hard-cooked egg. Or, stuff celery with a snappy cheese to serve with the mixed green salad.

If you need help with your menus, send for the "Victory Reducing Diet," which gives you balanced menus with both points and calories rationed. Please enclosed large stamped return envelope, and three cents in stamps or coins to cover cost of handling.

London Theater Life in Blitz Subject Of New Movie Starring Hayworth, Blair

By Louella O. Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD, July 8.—(INS) Victor Saville, top M-G-M producer, asked for an obtained his release from Metro and moves immediately to the Columbia lot to start the wheels rolling on "Heart of a City."

Saville, who made such hits as "The Citadel," "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "The Mortal Storm" and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," has a story right up his street in the yarn about life in a London theater during the worst days of the blitz. The movie will be in technicolor, starring Rita Hayworth and Janet Blair.

Jimmie Walker, one-time mayor of New York, may be in the Hollywood motion picture soon. Charlie Morrison has offered him the presidency of the new Morrison Film Company. "Will you accept 'Morrison's offer'?" I asked Jimmie over the long distance telephone. "If it is all right with the cloak and suit industry and the independent theater owners, whom I represent as counsel, I will accept the offer," he said. "The loyalty of these theater men would certainly keep me from doing anything they might feel would jeopardize my position with them."

It comes straight as a string that Jack Benny will go to Russia before he returns from his jaunt entertaining our boys overseas. The Russians have always gone for Benny in a big way. So far as military information permits us to know, Jack is the first American comedian to appear in Russia in wartime. Meanwhile, his next movie, "The Horn Blows at Midnight," won't get started at Warners until late in September.

The various and assorted producers who have been flitting with a movie based on the Hollywood Canteen had better get going. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has already scripted an original title "Here Comes the Band," based on the Canteen Kids Orchestra, the teen-aged boys and girls who cut up the rugs and set our service boys jitterbugging nightly. When the kids heard a movie had been written about them, and that they would appear with M-G-M stars, they said they hoped Mickey Rooney would be in the lineup. "He's solid!" was their verdict.

The Theater Guild and Katherine Cornell could not get together on the changes in "Embezzled Heaven," the Franz Werfel novel which Ladislav Bus-Fekete and Mary Helen Fay whipped into a play. So when it appears on Broadway this fall, Ethel Barrymore will be starred in the role of Tita. Understand Columbia is already bidding on the film right with a sky-high offer.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Major John Dettie, supposed to rush to Veronica Lake's bedside following her accident—didn't; Joan Bennett remains in the hospital for several days more. Nothing serious; is it wedding bells any day now for Eddie Hall, the actor, and beauty expert Gloria Bristol? Mickey Rooney and Sally Yarnell are signing into each other's eyes. Incidentally, Mickey's race horse, "In On Time," has been running at Agua Caliente, but hasn't been living up to his name with the bettors; Rex Ingram, one-time movie director who megaphoned Rudy Valentino to fame, is back from Mexico. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Nutrition More Important Than Exercise to Muscle Tone

By Dr. William Brady.

The early manifestations of aging are chronic fatigue or weariness and desire to relax or to sit and watch others work or play when normal folk want to go places or do things; tendency to take a melancholic outlook; graying of the hair; appearance of wrinkles; and flabbiness of the entire musculature, voluntary and involuntary (heart, artery, gastro-intestinal muscle) in contrast with the firmness of muscle in youth.

The last manifestation, flabbiness of muscle or lowered muscle tone is perhaps the most serious one, for the very reason that it creeps upon you.

I think of it every time I see my playmate Dr. E. . . . stepping along to the bowling green. The Doctor is only 83 but many an older geezer of 45 would come alive if he had the Doctor's muscle tone.

This muscle tone, elasticity, resilience I'm talking about is not a matter of phenomenal muscular development or strength. A reasonable amount of exercise is necessary and advisable to preserve it, but nutrition, not physical training, is the important factor of good muscle tone—and remember it applies to the state of the stomach and intestine muscle coat, the muscle coat of the arteries, the heart muscle, the breathing muscle, as well as it does to the voluntary skeletal muscles.

It is my opinion, and I don't know whether many medical colleagues will agree or not, that this flabbiness or impaired muscle tone of the individual who is, say, be-enjoy less exposure to sunlight, direct sunlight or indirect skylight, for various reasons. Exposure of the naked skin to sunlight is the natural way to manufacture vitamin D in the body. One reason elderly people do not expose themselves to sunlight is that they are more sensitive to the cold. I won't quarrel with them about that now. Another reason, which is deplorable and wrong, is that they are so fearful of "taking cold." Oh, well, I suppose there's no use trying to rationalize the old-timers about that—much easier to give 'em theirs in tablets.

Blaze Causes $50,000 Loss, Injures Two

Gas Burner Blamed for Fire at Dolly Dimples Laboratories.

A small gas burner was blamed here yesterday for a two-alarm fire which caused an estimated loss of $50,000 at the Dolly Dimples Laboratories, Inc., at 489 Stewart avenue, and sent two men to Grady hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

The two-story brick building, which houses the cosmetic firm, was almost completely razed by the flames, which were fed by highly inflammable chemicals and more than half a million processed paper containers. Equipment from seven stations answered the alarms.

L. D. Shearin, president of the firm, said the equipment and stock loss would be approximately $25,000. He said the building, owned by the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, was valued at the same figure. The building was almost a total loss.

Quick Action.
Except for quick action by firemen, there might have been serious damage from three large storage tanks, each of which contained 35,000 gallons of petroleum. A highly explosive fluid, Shearin said. Streams of water prevented the flames from reaching the tanks.

The two injured firemen were treated at Grady and then dismissed. Captain Marshall Dooley, 49, of Station 17, suffered a dislocated shoulder when he fell. Fireman James Pittman, 27, of No. 7 station, cut the fingers of his left hand.

Clouds of heavy, rolling smoke attracted hundreds of spectators to the scene, while the mass of fire-fighting equipment tied up traffic along Whitehall and Stewart avenues. Power company officials rerouted gasoline buses around Humphries and Stewart avenues. Trackless trolleys were stranded for more than an hour.

Burner Topples Over.
Shearin's young son, L. D. Shearin Jr., was one of the first to discover the blaze. He said the gas burner, used only once or twice a month, toppled over, igniting the inflammable chemicals. More than 20 employees hurried to safety.

Mrs. Luther Hamilton, the bookkeeper, however, didn't leave the building until after she had stuffed all the company records and valuable papers into the fireproof safe.

For a while the blaze threatened to spread to the warehouse of the Fire Insurance Company, on Whitehall street, where more than 1,000 new tires and other valuable rubber were stored. Steady streams of water, however, confined the flames to the one building.

Cotton Acreage May Be Lowest In 48 Years

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(AP)—The Agriculture Department reported today that this year's harvested acreage of cotton may be the smallest since 1895, although the War Food Administration had asked for a fairly substantial increase over last year.

In its first report of the season on cotton, the department estimated the acreage in cultivation on July 1 at 21,995,000 acres, or 5.6 per cent less than last year and 25 per cent less than the 1932-41 average.

Assuming abandonment of cotton land equivalent to the 10-year average, the harvested acreage would be 21,576,000 acres, or the smallest in 48 years.

No Forecast on Output.
The department made no forecast at this time as to the possible production. However, should the per acre yield equal the 10-year average, the crop would be about 9,500,000 bales compared with last year's about-average crop of 12,824,000 bales.

On the other hand, should the yield equal last year's unusually good one, production would total about 12,100,000 bales.

Cotton consumed by the United States during the 12-month period ending July 31 is expected to be about 11,250,000 bales. This year's crop will be supplemented by a reserve of about 10,900,000 bales from previous crops. However, much of this old cotton is of low grade and short staple length which is unsuited for many manufacturing purposes.

Planting Allotments.
The War Food Administration last winter made grower planting allotments which would have permitted as much as 30,000,000 acres to be planted. It sought extra production of long staple types needed in greater supply for the war effort. It also sought cottonseed for vegetable oil, livestock feed and other purposes.

The department's report said unfavorable weather in some sections of the cotton belt during the planting season contributed to the failure of the acreage to follow government recommendations. Rather sharp decreases were reported for Texas, Oklahoma, Georgia, Alabama and Arkansas.

COSMETIC FIRM BLAZE—Roaring flames, which are believed to have originated from a small gas burner, yesterday swept the Dolly Dimples Laboratories, Inc., at 489 Stewart avenue, S. W. Anti-Cracker Party Quits Augusta Polls

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 8.—(AP)—The Augusta Citizens' Union, which withdrew election workers yesterday and saw all of its candidates for city council outvoted by the Cracker party nominees, has announced that it will send its candidates into the general election of December.

The election yesterday was that of the Democratic white primary committee. Berry Fleming, leader of the Citizens' Union, said that he issued the order for candidates and workers not to appear at the polls when there was a last-minute change in election rules prohibiting the challenging of voters' eligibility.

C. W. Killebrew, head of the primary committee, said that Fleming misinterpreted the ruling, and that it would have applied only to "residents of suburban areas" who have voted in the city for years.

The Citizens' Union had planned to challenge any persons presenting themselves to vote who, in the opinion of the union, were ineligible.

Jay-Walking Blamed for 4 Atlanta Deaths

Six out of 11 traffic fatalities in Atlanta for the six-month period ending June 30 this year were pedestrians and four of the six pedestrian deaths were the result of jay walking, Assistant Police Chief G. Neal Ellis, in charge of traffic, said yesterday.

Warning that jay-walking is still the prime cause of traffic deaths, Ellis urged pedestrians to observe traffic signal lights and to cross streets only at intersections.

The records show that 54.5 per cent of all the deaths were of persons walking, and that at least two-thirds of the pedestrians themselves were violating city ordinances.

"With this sort of a statistical record facing pedestrians, it is difficult to see why people will take chances," Chief Ellis said.

"The law of averages is against continued jay-walking and the willful cutting of the red signal lights. Those lights and the ordinances against jay-walking are to protect those who use the streets. It is important that they be observed if they provide the maximum protection."

Bill Proposes Uniformity in Freight Rates

Present Structure Favors North Against South, Solon Asserts.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(AP)—Uniform freight rates throughout the nation are proposed in a bill by Representative Harris, Democrat, Arkansas, who said it "is only fair, just and right that we have the same opportunities in every section of this country for development."

Harris said the present rate structure, under investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission, favored the north against the south and west by giving the north lower rates than prevail in the other areas.

"The question of freight-rate discrimination is not a new one," the Arkansas representative declared.

"Much interest has been manifested for years in an effort to equalize our rate structures and it is inevitable that the time will come when one section will not be favored over another."

Harris said the ICC investigation has been under way for three years and that it will take some time for a decision.

"The congress should define a policy regarding freight-rate levels to establish uniform rates throughout the country," he declared.

"The commission's investigation is to ascertain whether existing rates violate existing law."

He asserted the nation had reached the stage "where national problems must inevitably be approached on a uniform basis, giving equal opportunity throughout the nation for our continued progress and development."

Maritime Union Lauded By FDR on Strike Pledge

NEW YORK, July 8.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, in a letter read at the national Maritime Union (CIO) convention today by its president, Joseph Curran, expressed appreciation for the "realization of your no-strike pledge for the duration."

"The men who sail our ships are doing a splendid job throughout the world and I feel sure they will continue to give their best efforts to the earliest possible conclusion of this world-wide struggle," the President said in the letter to Curran.

"It is of genuine interest to note that 12,000 members of your union proudly wear torpedoes pins," he said.

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

Another Boost Young citizens working behind founts, office stenographers, solid businessmen, barbers, bakers, bookmakers, and old John Fan, himself, have joined in giving Harry Hughes a hearty endorsement as manager of those noble lads, the Crackers.

A terrific blast was unleashed at the Atlanta management by Fred Digbe, sports editor of the New Orleans Item. But even Mr. Digbe, who was a bit far from the scene to know the facts, must agree now that something was wrong and that a change was only for the better.

And, after all, Al Leitz was paid in full for the season. He wasn't a victim of city slickers, even though he failed in the job assigned to him.

Harry Hughes proved his ability as a manager at West Palm Beach.

Eddie Morgan, captain of Georgia Tech's baseball team in 1923—he played under Kid Clay—and a performer in the old Million Dollar League, is visiting his brother, Captain Charley Morgan, U. S. Marines.

Morgan has lived in West Palm Beach for many years and was an enthusiastic booster of Hughes when he managed the team to a pennant.

"Harry was in tough competition. Look at this list of managers—Max Carey, Miami; Max Rosenfeld, Miami Beach; Herb Thomas, Fort Lauderdale; Jiggs Donahue, Hollywood, and Jim Poole, Fort Pierce. He outsmarted 'em. He had only three pitchers and a bunch of kids in the Class D league. But he won with a running ball club. He had 'em stealing second, third and home, and he used the hit-and-run regularly," Eddie Morgan pointed out.

Three Atlanta boys played with Hughes. LeRoy (Truck) Melvin caught and was used in a utility role. Chuck Henderson played alternately at third base and shortstop. Hubert (Big Train) Brown pitched.

Henderson led the league in stolen bases, I believe.

"Harry is smart and resourceful. He was given a leave of absence to manage at Miami when blackout regulations were installed. And later, when the league called it quits for the duration, he took a job as manager with Bluefield, W. Va. He's sure to hit it off with Atlanta fans. He knows baseball and how to get the best out of his fellow players," Morgan added.

Those Lush Days Eddie Morgan recalled with a relish the old days of the Million Dollar League. He played at Monroe with Slap PHILADELPHIA, July 8.—(AP) Merrill May's pinch single in the 14th inning broke up a scoreless tie and gave the Phillies a 1-to-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds today, after the Reds took the first game 7 to 5 before some 8,478 fans.

Dick (Kewpie) Barrett, starting his second game for the Phillies, went all the way in the nightcap.

MAINSTAY OF PIRATES—Last year Truett Banks (Rip) Sewell, Pittsburgh pitcher shown above burning one over the plate, led the National League in games lost. This year he has already won 12 and has a chance to lead the league in victories. He holds five wins over the Cubs.

THE BEWILDERED SWINGER.

Ernest Jones, that famous apostle of "Swing the Club Head," was standing on the practice tee at Maidstone, surrounded by sand dunes and ocean. Also by a brooding melancholy.

Jones has taught or instructed at one time or another more women than any three pros in the trade. In the list you will find such names as Virginia Van Wie, Elizabeth Hicks, Helen Hicks, and many others known to feminine golfing fame.

The able instructor was in a depressed mood as I came up. "It is so simple," he said, "so very simple, and they all make it so complex. Oh, so complex."

"Just what are you talking about?" I asked. "The food situation, gas, rubber or coal mining? Or the Brooklyn Dodgers?"

"I am talking about the game of golf," the instructor said. "There never was a simpler game that has been turned into so many contortions, where 98 per cent of the players are always in a bewildered and baffled state of mind. And all they have to do to play good golf is to swing the head of a club. Only that—and nothing else. And most of them do everything else except swing the club head."

The Main Trouble.

"The main trouble with golf," the earnest Ernest continued, "is that about 95 per cent of its players have only a blurred picture left. They are trying to concentrate on foot action, body action, wrist action, pivoting and a dozen other things. Now even Bobby Jones says he has to concentrate on three things during the swing. I claim that no one can concentrate on more than one thing at a time, and I don't care how smart he is. If everyone would just concentrate on using the hands to swing the club head, nothing else would matter."

"Golfers are taught to start the swing with the left hip—by showing the left foot—by getting the left side around—by locking the head and neck to keep from looking up—all this and very much more. This is quite impossible. Quite."

The Correct Way.

"Here is the way good golf should be played," Jones hurried along.

"Only your hands are in contact with the club. So all you have to do is to see that those hands, without any extra effort, without any added pressure, swing that club head. If you will do that, the body will naturally turn, the foot action will be correct and you will look at the ball, your only target."

"Club head speed is what gets both distance and control, in the main. You can't get genuine club head speed by any other way than swinging, even if you are two Samsons and a Stranger Lewis. There should be no thought of hitting or punching. Only swinging."

"You can't take the golf swing apart, as they try to do in motion pictures. It is one unbroken motion—and it's so simple—oh, so simple. That's what makes me so sad—to see all these millions suffering so much when there is no need for any such trouble."

"In the correct way, you stand naturally and comfortably—you keep relaxed. Your grip is firm, but not tight. You must think only of the hands, the club head and the ball together. Never mind the ponds and rough and bunkers on ahead. The right swing will put these in their proper places as you keep hitting only the fairways and

83-Pound Tarpon Caught at St. Pete

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., July 8.—(AP) Just when it seemed that St. Petersburg's ninth annual tarpon roundup wasn't going to produce even one tarpon, Lieutenant R. L. Todd, stationed at Egmont Key, at the mouth of Tampa Bay, on the 27th of June, today entered an 83-pound silver king.

The roundup this year, cut from two and a half months to one month—June 15 to July 15—is confined to rowboat fishing because of the wartime restrictions on gasoline and fishermen have shown little interest in fishing for tarpon, which are generally considered non-edible.

Unless a larger tarpon is caught and entered Lieutenant Todd will win a $25 war bond, the roundup's capital prize.

ON THE LINE With Considine.

(Pinch-Hitting for Bob Considine.)

NEW YORK, July 8.—(AP)—My wife used to say (before I strangled her) that I wore a joke too thin. But I must insist on giving you one more installment on the question of whether or not Babe Ruth did point to the bleachers before hitting the home run off Charley Root in Chicago in the 1932 World Series. This time, ladies and gentlemen, I bring to the stand an expert, who...

Grimes were riding the Babe from the bench. And Babe got pretty hot under the collar. When the count reached three and two, Malone and Grimes grew most abusive. Babe looked over at the bench at them and said: "Let him put this one over and I'll knock it over the wall out there!" That's a direct quote from Roy Van Graffan, plate umpire that day, and now an International League umpire. Roy went on to say that Babe did point in the direction of center field, and did holler at Grimes and Malone. Sounds like pretty good testimony to me.

Then there's another witness, Waite Hoyt. Now, Waite is only down in the baseball record books as a victim of fellow who pitched the most world series games. He and Red Ruffing were each in seven series, but Waite pitched 12 games and Red only 10. Along with Ruffing, Bill James and Dick Rudolph, Hoyt stands with men who have won two games in four-game series. He leads in innings pitched in a four-game series with 18 in 1928, a mark also shared by Rudolph and Ruffing.

He allowed only three earned runs in shipping Willie Steward and the Cardinals in four straight that year, and exactly no runs in taking the second five games from the Giants in 1921, beating Phil Douglas and Art Nehf. The lone flaw in Hoyt's record is that he gave up six home runs on balls in the two games he pitched in 1928, a record.

Waite is now a fine baseball radio commentator for WLRC in Cincinnati, and he scribbles:

"Have read both your columns concerning the Ruth incident of 1932. I'm going to string along with the legend that the Babe did perform the feat. Daniel and Private George Powers to the contrary. Here is my reason:

"The Babe could never remember names, but he never forgot his successes on the ball field. If he tried the unusual once and got away with it, he'd try it again when the situation called for it. Sometimes within a week—sometimes years later. When he called his shot against Root it was a repetition of the stunt he pulled in Boston in 1927. It was during the much-advertised home-run race between Gehrig and Ruth. The Yanks landed in Fenway park for a double-header. In the first game the Babe looked particularly bad. He was out of his mind, and someone who had paid his way in, for I don't think he was watching the game, he was so busy pulling corks from bootleg hooch—gave Babe the riding of his life. Ruth said nothing, but in between games he declared himself, 'I'll show that mugg'.

"The first three times at bat during the second contest the Babe didn't show anyone anything. I forgot who pitched for Boston, but whoever it was breezed him three times—but he didn't drink with the nose like a stop light was having a field day. He called Ruth names even the worldly kind of swat had never heard before. The fourth time at bat Ruth stood on the home plate and pointed to the right field seats.

"The right field bleachers in the Red Sox park, as you know, is a pretty 'fur piece.' Further than Wrigley field by far. The first ball pitched, Ruth hit about four rows from the top, to the area to which he had pointed. He did his famous turkey trot around the bases and when he landed on the home plate, he very solemnly doffed his cap and executed a courtly bow. Then he called a park cop and said: 'T've shown that guy how to throw the bum out. But, by that time the bum and his bottles had disappeared.

"That is an actual story. I didn't see the Root-Ruth incident, but I did see that one. I know Ruth was capable of those things, because as anyone who played with him knows, he was capable of even better than that. Your friend, Private George Powers, didn't take this into consideration. That, when Ruth pointed to the center field seats in Wrigley field, in his moment of wild prediction, the Babe did not single out any special and designated spot. Just the general direction. That day in Boston it was a gesture towards the right field seats. To the eye, the ball seemed to carry to the identical spot. But a bleachers is large, and had the ball landed anywhere within the radius of two hundred feet the effect would have been the same. ... Glad you're within reading range."

He's glad! And I'm catching the 3.38.

DON BINGO INURED.

Don Bingo, who finished third in Monday's $50,000 Massachusetts handicap, may be through with racing. Dr. H. M. Lewis, Suffolk Downs veterinarian, disclosed the Binglin Stock Farm 4-year-old colt suffered a broken bone in each of his fore feet. The South American-bred colt probably will be shipped to the farm as soon as he can be moved.

Low Carpenter Brought Back By Washington

Lookout Right-Hander Worked Three-Hitter Against Travs.

CHATTANOOGA, July 8.—(AP) Low Carpenter, bespectacled right-handed hurler who has won 100 and lost three for Chattanooga since he joined the team June 15, has been returned to the parent Washington club, the Lookouts' front office announced today.

The office said it was understood Washington would send Carpenter on to Minneapolis.

Lew's latest triumph was a three-hitter in the opening game of a double-header against Little Rock last night. He attempted to carry on in the nightcap but was relieved in the sixth.

The announcement of the Chattanooga club's shift to Montgomery in a franchise change, was offset somewhat by the announcement of the return of star right-hander, was back on the active list after several weeks of trouble with a twisted knee.

ST. LOUIS, July 8.—(AP)—Lieutenant Hal Schumacher, formerly of the New York Giants, formerly transferred to the Lambert Field Naval Air Station and will manage and pitch for the Wings' baseball team.

Schumacher, who joined the Naval Reserve last December, had a record of 154 victories and 117 defeats in 11 seasons with the American Association, and a three-game series with the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Bob Scheffing, formerly of the Chicago Cubs, is the team's catcher.

Frank Doljack Austrian Skier Joins Training Center Staff

CAMP HALE, Colo., July 8.—(AP)—To the impressive roster of winter sports experts at the Army mountain training center has been added Friedl Pfeiffer, Austrian-born skier and climber who formerly headed the Sun Valley ski school in Idaho.

Crackers Split With Chicks, Tie for League Lead

Atlanta Takes Last Game, 4-3; Curtis Winner

Largest Crowd of Year Watches Double Bill At Ponce de Leon.

By JACK TROY, Constitution Sports Editor. Manager Harry Hughes must have a soft spot in his heart, for he felt sorry enough for Memphis to leave Rene Cortes in the first game long enough for the Chicks to score seven runs and win their only game of the series, 7 to 5, last night. In the second game of the double-header the Crackers triumphed, 4 to 3.

The victory in the second game sent the Crackers into a tie with Knoxville for the lead of the Southern League.

Wipe Out Lead. Memphis wiped out a two-run Cracker lead with a seven-run rally in the fifth inning of the opener. There were three straight hits before Cortes walked in a run. The rout continued until Stanley Todd came in and retired the side.

The Crackers peeked away at Goat Walker and Roy Kelley came into stop a dangerous rally in the seventh.

Charley Cozart needed help in the second game and Vernon Curtis, appearing on the mound for the third straight night, was all that was needed.

He fanned four of the six batters he faced, and the Chicks were through. Curtis was the winning pitcher.

Roxie Bush retired for a pinch hitter and Mo finished the game. He was the losing pitcher.

Skipper Hughes paced a seventh-inning attack in the second game. He connected for two singles and a double. The latter blow started the game winning rally in the eighth.

Largest Crowd. The season's largest crowd witnessed the double-header. It was annual men's night and there were almost 9,000 fans in the stands.

By actual count there were 8,484 civilians and almost 400 soldiers. Paid attendance was 1,492.

The Crackers move on to Little Rock and Memphis for a nine-day trip before returning to engage Montgomery in a new home stand. Meanwhile, the All-Star game will be played tonight at Nashville and Maclin and Deal will represent the Crackers. The other Crackers will sit in the stands and watch the game.

Four wins in five starts gives Skipper Hughes a good beginning with the Cracker club. Last night's loss was just one of those things. He might have removed Cortes a lot earlier and saved the game. He took a gamble and lost.

First Game. Gray rapped a single to center, with one away in the first, but a fast Cracker move lay ensued when McElreath bunted to Viers. The twin killing went by way of Hartfield to Hughes.

Maclin led off the Cracker half with a double to left and moved to third on Viers' fly to Gray. He did the same, however, as Hughes lined to Mitrus and Deal grounded out.

Dews drew a walk to lead off the second. Treadway bunted and beat it out. He went to second and Dews went all the way home as Connors threw the ball away trying to make a play at first. He had no play and should have held the ball.

A variety of things led to the second Cracker run in the fourth. Dews walked and was forced by Treadway, making it two out. Vetterol tipped Smith's bat and got a base for interference. Hartfield drew a grounder through Mitrus' legs and Treadway scored. The Crackers never did get a hit in the inning.

Gunnells, Mitrus and Walker put singles together, losing the bases in the fifth. Hartfield made a fine play on Walker's grounder. Chatham's strikeout was the first out. Cortes walked Gray, forcing in Gunnells. McElreath cleaned the bases with a double. He did the same, however, as Connors' infield out and scored on a passed ball. Holiday walked. Vetterol bounced a single past second. Gunnells, up for the second time, hit a hump-backed liner to short center, scoring Holiday. Vetterol scored on a wild pitch. And so the Chicks had seven runs and a fine lead.

The IHR's in the Democratic party are just kidding themselves in thinking that anyone has a chance to beat the President for that nomination, no matter how much they are encouraged by the internecine battles in Washington. They should remember that Abe Lincoln had just as many beefs in his official family when he was running the north's end of the War Between the States and it did not affect him politically.

Fried Foods Provide Concentrated Energy

Fats are an essential part of every diet, the amount needed depends upon how much muscular activity the individual engages in. Since fats are the most highly concentrated form of energy it is plain to see that they are extremely valuable to the person who does vigorous, physical labor. But some fat, more or less, is needed in every diet for in the process of metabolism all proteins and carbohydrates are burned in the fats.

Fats take longer to digest than do other foods, thus they retard the feeling of hunger for a long period, and the fats in a meal are the most filling and appetite-satisfying element. When our meals are short on meats and butter, and must be made up largely of vegetables and other light foods, the addition of one fatty or fried food goes a long way toward making them satisfactory both from a standpoint of appetite appeal and hunger assuaging. A fruit pie with a pastry crust would be rightly termed a fatty food, because of the pastry, so would French fried potatoes, and the popular fritters and croquettes. Try these fritters and croquettes to fill out a meal that otherwise would be lacking a substantial quality. This menu is an example of how to fit in a fried food to best advantage:

MENU

Ham and Corn Fritters, Syrup
Buttered Peas Sliced Tomatoes Rolls

Berries With Cream or Melon Slice

Ham and Corn Fritters.
1 cup thick canned or cooked corn.

1-2 cup ground cooked ham.
1 tablespoon minced onion.
2-3 cup flour.

1-2 teaspoons baking powder.
Mix corn, ham and onion. Sift flour and baking powder together and add to corn mixture. When blended drop by teaspoons into deep, hot fat, and fry until golden brown. Drain on unglazed paper and serve with cream or tomato sauce or with syrup. Corned beef may be used instead of ham.

Economy Croquettes.
1-2 pound ground beef
1 cup raw grated carrots
1 cup fine moist bread crumbs
1-4 cup grated onion

1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon pepper
Combine all ingredients. Divide into six parts and shape into croquettes. Roll in dry bread crumbs, then in milk and again in crumbs. Cook in deep hot fat until brown. Drain on unglazed paper. Serve with any desired sauce.

Meat and Potato Croquettes.
1-2 cup ground cooked meat

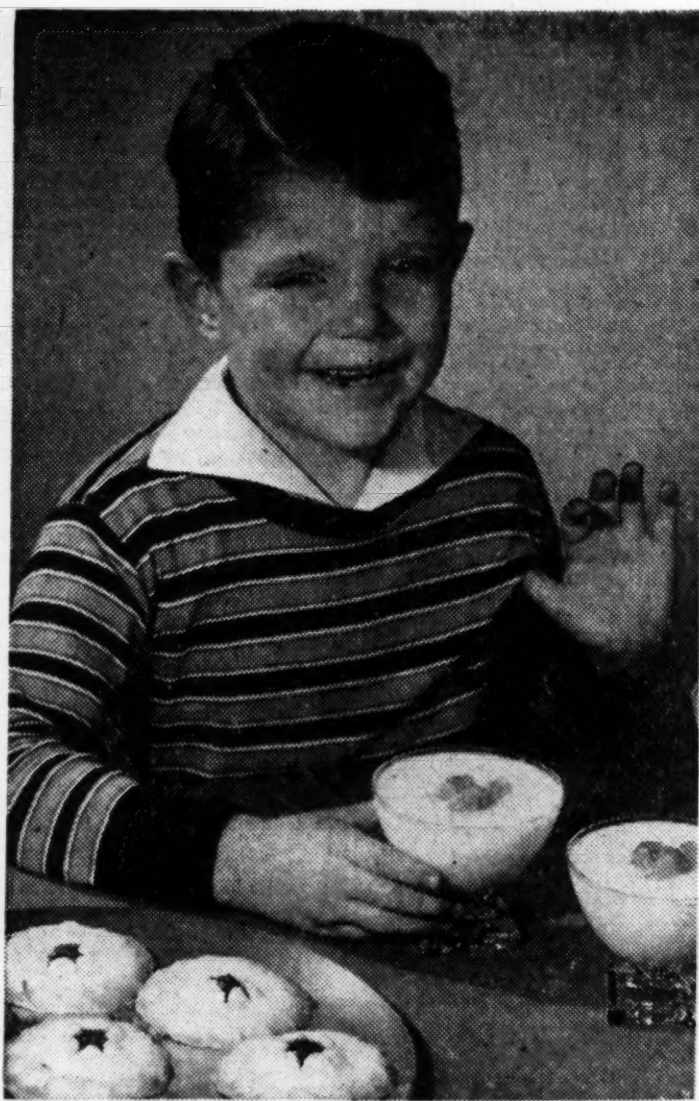

4 cups mashed potatoes
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon onion juice
2 tablespoons minced parsley
Fine dry bread crumbs
2 eggs
4 tablespoons water

Use any leftover meat. Add seasonings to mashed potatoes.
Flatten out 4 tablespoons of the potato mixture, and place about 1 teaspoon of the meat in the center.
Roll potato around the meat shaping rolls like cylinders, covering most completely. Beat eggs and combine with water. Roll each croquette in crumbs, then in egg mixture, then in crumbs. Fry in deep hot fat about 4 minutes or until brown. Drain on unglazed paper. Serve with crisp bacon and fresh sliced tomatoes.

Potato Croquettes:
3 cups hot mashed potatoes
1 egg yolk
Few grains of cayenne
Few grains of nutmeg
1 t. teaspoon minced parsley
1 teaspoon onion juice

Combine ingredients thoroughly and shape into balls or cylinders.
Fry in deep, hot fat, then drain on unglazed paper. For a meatless meal serve with creamed eggs, and a tossed green salad.

Cupcakes, Ice Cream For Soldier on Leave

When Johnny comes marching home on that well-earned furlough, one of the first things you think of, aside from the joy of seeing him, is having for him the home-made things he likes to eat.
Men like ice cream and cake for dessert; and soldiers are famous for the quantity of ice cream they can eat. So, while he's home make ice cream for him, and when special friends are invited in, surround the ice cream with fluffy cupcakes decorated with military insignia made of butter icing. Here are the recipes:

Fluffy Yellow Cupcakes.

2 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
3-4 teaspoon salt
3-8 cup butter or margarine

2-3 cup light corn syrup
1-2 cup sugar
2 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla
1-2 cup milk

Sift flour, measure; sift 3 times with baking powder and salt.
Cream butter until soft; all corn syrup and beat until fluffy. Add half the sugar and beat until well blended. Add egg yolks, beat until light, stir in vanilla. Add flour alternately with milk, beginning and ending with flour. Beat egg whites until stiff and gradually beat in remaining 1-2 cup sugar. Fold egg whites into cake batter lightly but thoroughly. Fill greased cupcake pans two-thirds full, and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, about 15 to 20 minutes. Cool on rack before frosting. Makes 12 large cupcakes.

Butter Frosting.

1-4 pound unsalted butter
3-4 ounce cornstarch Beat together ingredients until the right consistency to put through pastry tube. Tint with vegetable coloring. Flavor as desired.

Homemade ice cream surrounded by cupcakes frosted with military insignia makes a splendid dessert for a soldier on leave or refreshments when his friends drop in for a call.

Making Pickles

The calls coming into our office these days indicate that Victory gardens are producing cucumbers and stimulating an interest in pickle-making. Following are recipes for a variety of excellent pickles.

Bread and Butter.

3 quarts sliced cucumbers
3 onions
1-2 cup salt
3 cups vinegar
1 cup water
3 cups brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1-2 teaspoon ginger
2 tablespoons mustard seed
1 teaspoon turmeric
1-2 tablespoon celery seed
1/2 hot red pepper
1 piece horseradish

Mix cucumbers, onions (sliced) and salt. Let stand 5 hours. Drain.
Boil vinegar, water, sugar and seasonings 3 minutes. Add cucumbers and onion and simmer 10 to 20 minutes. (Do not boil). Pack into hot jars, and seal at once.

Dill Pickles.

35 to 40 fresh cucumbers
2 tablespoons mixed spices
3-4 pound dill
2 cups salt
2 gallons water
2 cups vinegar

Wash and dry cucumbers. Put a layer of dill and 1-2 of the spices in a stone jar. Add the cucumbers.
Put the remaining spices and dill on the top of the cucumbers. Boil salt, water and vinegar 2 minutes.
Cool to room temperature and pour over cucumbers. Cover with a plate weighted down to hold the cucumbers under the brine. Keep at an even temperature (80 to 85 degrees F.). Remove scum each day. The pickles are ready for canning when they are crisp, uniform in color, and well flavored with dill. This usually requires from 2 to 4 weeks. Pack the cured pickles into hot jars, cover with hot brine, and seal at once.

Note: Strain the brine in which the pickles are cured and boil 5 minutes, or make fresh brine. If to be stored a long time, dill pickles should be processed in water bath 15 minutes at simmering.

Cucumber Pickles—Sour.

Wash and dry fresh cucumbers.
Cover with brine (1 cup salt to 1 gallon cold water). Let stand 24 hours. Drain cucumbers and cover with equal parts water and vinegar. Let stand 3 or 4 days. Drain cucumbers. Pack into hot jars.
Cover with fresh, hot vinegar and seal at once. Spices and a small amount of sugar may be added to the vinegar.

Cucumber Pickles—Sweet.

1 gallon brined cucumbers
2 quarts vinegar for soaking
4 to 6 cups sugar
2 tablespoons mixed spices
1-2 quarts vinegar for syrup
Soak brined cucumbers in several changes of warm water to remove excess salt. Use a large needle to puncture each cucumber near the ends and at the center.

Cover with 1 part water and 3 parts vinegar and let stand a week.
Discard liquid and drain cucumbers. Add 2 cups sugar, the spices, and 2 cups water, to 1-2 quarts vinegar. Boil minutes and pour, boiling hot, over the cucumbers.
Let stand 3 days. Remove spices and drain off liquids. Pack pickles into jars. Add the remaining sugar to the liquid. Bring to the boiling point. Pour, while hot, over the pickles and seal at once.

Old-Fashioned Chunk Pickles.

5 quarts cucumbers
2 cups salt
Vinegar for soaking
2-3 quarts vinegar for syrup
5 to 6 cups sugar
1 tablespoon whole allspice
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 pod red pepper
1 piece horseradish

Wash and cut cucumbers into 1-inch pieces. Soak 3 days in brine made by dissolving 2 cups salt in 1 gallon cold water. Drain and soak cucumbers 3 days in clear water. (Do not change water).
Drain. Cover cucumbers with equal parts water and vinegar and simmer 20 minutes. Discard liquid. Add sugar and spices to the 2-3 quarts vinegar. Simmer 10 minutes. Pour while hot over cucumbers and let stand 24 hours.
Reheat liquid and pour back over cucumbers. Do this 3 or 4 consecutive days. Pack pickles into hot jars. Cover with the liquid (boiling hot) and seal at once. If there is not enough liquid to cover, add more vinegar.

Colorful Dessert

Cherry Blanc-Mange: Scald 1 cup milk. Mix 6 tablespoons cornstarch with 1-3 cup sugar and a pinch of salt, then stir in 1 well beaten egg. Mix and then add the hot milk gradually, stirring constantly. Return to the saucepan in which the milk was scalded and stir over a slow fire until thickened, smooth and boiling. Remove from the fire and add 1-2 cup canned, pitted sour cherries drained from the juice. Pour into 6 individual molds and set aside to cool and stiffen. Turn out and serve with cherry sauce made as follows: Put the remainder of the cherries (using a number 2 can) and the juice in a saucepan, add 1-2 cup sugar or honey and heat to the boiling point. Mix 1 tablespoon cornstarch with 2 tablespoons cold water and stir into the boiling cherries. Let boil up, remove from the fire and cool before using. One teaspoon lemon or orange juice may be added if desired.

Specials for Summer

Certain foods and certain seasons seem to be natural go-togethers. These dishes have a special affinity for summer. Try them:

Savory Beet and Green Bean Salad: Put 2 cups sliced cooked beets canned or fresh cooked and chilled in a bowl and sprinkle with 2 spring onions cut in very thin slices. Over the beets put 2 cups chilled, cooked green beans and sprinkle with salt and pepper.
Put 1-3 cup mayonnaise in a small bowl and beat in the juice of half a lemon, 1-2 teaspoon paprika, 1-2 teaspoon celery seeds and 1-2 teaspoon dry mustard. Pour the dressing over the vegetables, mix lightly with a fork and heap in a salad bowl lined with lettuce.
Serve with any cold meat.

Chef's Salad Bowl: Line a wooden salad bowl with cut lettuce and make a well in the center. Cut cold left-over lamb or veal in small cubes. To 2 cup cubed meat add 1 cup finely cut crisp celery, 1 small green pepper cut in slivers, 2 green onions sliced thin, 1 cup shredded raw carrot. Mix 1-2 cup mayonnaise with 2 tablespoons lemon juice, and 2 tablespoons tomato catsup. Mix lightly with the salad, heap in the bowl and sprinkle with 1-4 pound Swiss cheese cut to match-like sticks.

Serve very cold as a dinner salad for a hot night. Garnish with radish roses and minced parsley.

Salmon Salad: Flake the contents of a half pound can of children's salmon and mix lightly with 1 cup sliced celery, 1 hard cooked egg chopped fine, 2 tablespoons shredded green pepper and 2 tablespoon lemon juice. Arrange crisp lettuce leaves in cups on a cold platter. Moisten the salad mixture with prepared mayonnaise or salad dressing and heap in the lettuce cups. Cut 2 tomatoes in wedge-shaped pieces and garnish the salads with these and with sprigs of crisp watercress.

Fruit Sherbet: Heap 1 cup water to the boiling point, stir in 1-2 cup honey and then let cool. When cold add the juice of 2 oranges, the juice and grated rind of 1 large lemon and a pinch of salt.
Beat the whites of 2 eggs until almost stiff, whip the liquid mixture into the egg whites with a fork and then pour into the freezing pan of the refrigerator. Set the refrigerator to very cold for freezing and freeze the sherbet until it is stiff around the edges. Remove the tray and stir the sherbet with a fork, pulling the frozen edges in to the center and mashing well.
Finish freezing, stirring once more during the process.

Macaroni-Chicken Salad

1-2 cup diced cooked chicken
2 cups cooked elbow macaroni
1 tablespoon grated onion
3-4 cup cooked mushrooms (or canned)
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
3-4 cup salad dressing or mayonnaise
Curly lettuce or watercress
Quartered tomatoes

Combine all ingredients except salad greens and tomatoes. Place in refrigerator several hours or until thoroughly chilled. Arrange crisp salad greens in a bowl and place chilled salad mixture on the greens. Garnish with tomato quarters. This is a delicious and economical luncheon salad, serving 6 to 8.

Cook's Notebook

Gingerbread with pecan sauce is a good dessert idea. Make the pecan sauce by combining 1 tablespoon margarine, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 3-4 cup water and 1-4 cup molasses. Cook until thickened, and add 1-4 cup chopped pecans.

To serve plain cake at its best,
make only one layer at a baking.
Instead of icing the entire top of the cake, put an inch-wide band of icing around the edge.
Sprinkle with chopped nuts.

When shortening is reduced in cakes, keep the sugar content normal. Sugar helps make the cake tender and soft.

Cut several little slits in a veal roast before cooking it and in each slit poke a bit of anchovy paste. Cook the roast in the usual manner. The anchovy gives an unusual and hard-to-define flavor to the meat. Be careful not to use too much of it—about 1-4 teaspoonful in each slit and not more than six slits to a four or five-pound roast.

BACKYARD PICNICS ARE "IN"

Picnics can and should happen more frequently than ever this year. There's no better way to relax than to get close to Mother Nature. And because you can have your own comfy beach chairs always handy, you'll find picnics in your own backyard are more restful and just as much fun as driving a long distance. So "Take to the Backyard" as often as possible this summer.

Let Mom mix the baking powder bi-the liquid—that's an outdoors job for Dad. Add almost enough liquid for drop biscuits, then everyone join in and take a large spoonful of dough and shape it over the trimmed end of the stick; hold it over the coals, and what a miracle!

Fill the center holes with Clear Brook do it often—both the picnic and the Prisoners To Train for War Jobs

Steps to train "graduating" inmates of Tattall prison for war-essential jobs were taken yesterday by Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools.

Governor Arnall immediately placed his full approval on the project, which would establish a vocational educational program for men nearing the completion of their prison terms. Collins said a similar program might possibly be set up later for women prisoners.

Prison Commission Chairman Clem Rainey asked Collins to survey facilities of Tattall with a view to installing the training program. This survey will be made early next week by J. R. Wommack, assistant state supervisor of trades and industrial defense education.

The prison training program will be free to the state, with the federal government paying all bills, according to M. D. Mobley, state director of vocational education. The program will be limited to the equipment now on hand as it is not possible to obtain new equipment, Mobley added.

45-55 Cent Wage Range Okayed for Oil Workers

A wage range of 45 to 55 cents an hour for laborers employed by the Sinclair Refining Company of Atlanta in the Charleston, S. C., labor area has been approved by the fourth regional War Labor Board, it was disclosed yesterday. The range will be effective from June 16.

The board also approved new rate ranges for the Georgia Continental Telephone Company, at Monroe, permitting increases ranging from three cents to 25 cents an hour for 62 employees now receiving 30 to 75 cents an hour depending upon job classifications. This action will be retroactive to January 1, 1943, it was announced.

1,500 Bullets for Every Axis Soldier Made in Canada, U. S.

TORONTO, July 8.—(P)—"Gigantic battles in which unheard-of quantities of war material will be consumed" are coming soon, Chairman Donald Nelson, of the United States War Production Board, told Canadians today, but the Allies are getting the material, he added.

"This one continent," he said in an address at the Canadian Club, "is producing the materials of war at a rate enormously higher than anything that the Axis could show at the peak of its strength."

"This year, in this continent alone, we will produce almost twice as much in combat munitions as the Axis."

He admonished that "this is no time to speak of easing up in our efforts" while giving these figures on accomplishment by the United States and Canada alone.

Since the outbreak of the war, almost 115,000 planes have been produced and "before the end of this year we will be producing a completed plane every 4 2/3 minutes."

More than 175,000 larger caliber guns for ground armies alone have been finished and more than 1,500,000 machine guns and 6,000,000 rifles and submachine guns have been manufactured.

More than 200,000,000 rounds of artillery ammunition (not counting naval) have been made.

About 25,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition—"enough to let us fire over 1,500 bullets at every soldier in the Axis armies"—have been turned out.

Close to 60,000 tanks, more than 1,800,000 trucks and nearly 70,000 scout and other combat vehicles cars have rolled off the assembly lines of the two nations. Canada supplied about one-third of the truck total and close to 20,000 of the scout cars.

Production of ocean-going merchant vessels now has reached 20,000,000 deadweight tons and the annual rate of production now is 22,000,000.

Not counting mosquito craft and auxiliaries, naval vessels totaling 2,000,000 displacement tons have been completed and "these fast, modern fighting boats will be joined every month by sister ships totaling an average of 200,000 tons."

Emphasizing that to these United States-Canadian figures must be added the vast production totals of England, Russia and the other Allies, Nelson said:

"If the Nazi and the Jap warlords are completely insane, they will recognize that the sound they make 'is the voice of doom.'"

"I would be the last to attempt to minimize the serious effect of the spasmodic strikes and riots on the war production program . . . (but) for the first five months of 1943 . . . only 7-10 of 1 per cent of production was delayed by these strikes," Nelson said at one point.

"We plan to produce an umbrella of safety and put it over the heads of the fighting men of the United Nations. We plan to lay down a barrage of safety before them as they advance . . . We cannot satisfy ourselves that we have done enough, until we have done everything that we can do to conserve their young lives for the peacetime world to come."

OPA Orders Simplification In Food Pricing

New Mark-Up Regulations To Become Effective August 5.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(P)—The Office of Price Administration, responding to demands for a simplification of food pricing methods, today issued over-all fixed mark-up regulations, under which most groceries will be priced by sellers.

The new regulations become effective August 5.

The result will be: Wholesalers will price most dry groceries under one regulation, instead of a great many. Retailers will have one regulation for almost all dry groceries and perishables except meat. Major grocery store commodities not covered are beer, liquors, candy, bread, milk, ice cream, fresh fish and tobacco.

The regulations supply the fixed mark-ups which wholesalers and retailers will apply to net cost to establish their selling prices. OPA said its studies indicate that the mark-ups provided will maintain the same general level of prices in effect April 8, the date of President Roosevelt's hold-the-line order.

The new mark-ups will not apply where community-wide retail dollars and cents ceilings are in effect.

$72,963 Surplus Shown By State Welfare Office

The state welfare department closed the fiscal year with a $72,963.34 surplus, and is trimming the operation expenses in its new budget by $40,502.97, Director A. Hartley said, in face of an automatic merit system salary raise which applied to employees of not only the state department but every county department within the state.

London Dinner Reunites 10 From Atlanta

Lieutenant Colonel Roy LeCraw, former Atlanta mayor, and nine other Atlantans, met recently in London for a dinner and reunion, according to a notice received from Army headquarters of the European theater of operations.

The song of the evening was "Rambling Wreck from Georgia Tech," according to the dispatch. They also had a personal message from Governor Ellis Arnall.

Those present besides LeCraw were Staff Sergeant W. F. Cole, of 1 Baltimore place; Staff Sergeant Bill Jones, of 2103 McLendon avenue, N. E.; Captain Claude Goza, 829 Courtney drive; Private George Shearouse, 908 Juniper street; Staff Sergeant Harold L. Morris, 1691 Evans drive; Corporal Houston B. Quinn, 972 Wilson road; Sergeant Chester H. Summers, 64 25th street; Corporal V. D. Griffin, 487 Greenwood avenue; and Corporal Julius A. Perlinski.

Drunk driving convictions always have been checked, but the new system will check all offenses—even to warnings about parking on yellow lines and parking overtime and even if no case was booked.

Traffic 'Repeaters' Slated for Shock

Chronic traffic law violators are slated for a shock, Judge Luke S. Arnold, of the traffic court, and Assistant Police Chief G. Neal Ellis, in charge of traffic law enforcement, announced yesterday.

In the future, when a defendant appears in court, his entire record for the past two years will be spread before him to point an accusing finger, and if he has had a conviction in that time, a five-year record will be displayed.

"The system has been worked out, and it is fool proof," Judge Arnold said. "We are going to deal more harshly with the repeater than with the casual offender, who technically violated the law."

Drunk driving convictions always have been checked, but the new system will check all offenses—even to warnings about parking on yellow lines and parking overtime and even if no case was booked.

Woman's Sentence Upheld by Court

New trials for a man and woman convicted of murder, in different parts of the state, were denied yesterday by the Georgia supreme court.

The court upheld the conviction of Mrs. Elsie Simmons in the slaying of Harris Jones, elderly Jones county farmer. She was given a life term along with Ernest Fuller and Ennis Key in the Jones superior court. Justice Atkinson dissented from the majority opinion.

The high court also upheld the conviction of Carl Hyde in the slaying of J. C. Metcalf in Whitfield county. Metcalf, prison guard, was slain with a shovel while guarding a camp in which Hyde was a convict. Two former trials ended in mistrials, and on January 19, 1943, Hyde was found guilty without recommendation.

Conviction of Bruno Mika for robbery in Monroe county also was upheld.

Supreme Court 'Catches Up' After 75 Years

For the first time in about 75 years, the calendar of the Georgia supreme court was "absolutely clean" yesterday, Chief Justice Charles Reid said.

"We do not have a single undecided case which has been calendared," he added. "Of course, there are some cases on the calendar to be heard next week, but there are no cases on the calendar on which we could announce a decision today. We are current on every case."

The high court, hard at work, has handed down 29 decisions this week. It averages about 400 opinions per year, Justice Reid said. In addition, it has about 100 applications for certiorari from the court of appeals.

Other members of the court include Presiding Justice R. C. Bell, and Justices W. F. Jenkins, Warren Grice, W. H. Duckworth and W. Y. Atkinson.

Horse Show 'Suicides' Mark Hollywood Independence Day

(The following article is by Eugenia Bridges Harty, music, art and drama editor of The Constitution, now on a western tour.)

By EUGENIA BRIDGES HARTY. HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(By Air Mail.)—Independence Day having been celebrated out here with the usual liberty-loving nonchalance, it is not surprising the casualties are beginning to come to light a few days later.

For instance, the big events of the day included the annual Horse Show at the Riviera Country Club (where the writer is currently basking in sunshine and cool breezes) and the preview opening of the giant Hollywood Bowl. At the former, Robert Taylor's trainer and horses copped honors, while three young lady riders bit the dust; at the latter, Gracie Allen went off with some laurels and an incapacitated index finger, following the debut of her piano concerto which she herself executed, as soloist with Paul Whiteman's band.

But aside from these mishaps, no serious accidents were reported right away. It is important to note, however, that the tragedies aired today all hark back to these events.

Seven Deaths. In other words malice of forethought has been established in the case of each of the seven deaths. At first it was thought to be a suicide pact. For all seven who blew their brains out were in the same business. Four were designers of gowns for Madame; three were ladies' tailors. But the facts refute the supposition of a pact.

The three tailors attended the horse shindig with their families. One of the designers was present with his family. None, however, seems to have had a speaking acquaintance with the other.

As for the remaining three stylists, they were present at the opening of the Hollywood Bowl. They were not acquainted with each other, either. And they had not attended the horse show.

Within 24 Hours. Yet all seven inflicted their own deaths within 24 hours of each other. It looks like a suicide pact at first glance. Yet surviving wives and husbands testify that they have never even been introduced to the members of the other families. It could not have been a pact.

One piece of evidence was discovered today. It was some scribbled notes, found in the pocket of one of the ladies' tailors present at the horse show. It said: "Notes taken at horse show; memo re: current popular costumes for sports at swank resorts in Calif. (1) black chiffon with rhinestone buttons; silver fox cape; black, off face hat trimmed with tossed tomato salad, open-toed, high heel black sandals (2) green shorts, purple sweater, pink play shoes (3) white bathing suit (4) slinky suit of leopard skin worn with turtle-neck yellow sweater."

From that time on the notes became indistinct. His wife says the victim was morose all evening. He was a famous French designer who escaped Hitler's but not Hollywood's fashions.

Symptoms Reported. The other victims' wives or husbands, as the case may be, have similar symptoms to report. All appeared distraught and depressed, following the entertainments. One who went to the Bowl dictated a letter to her secretary the next morning which has proved a valuable clue towards solving her otherwise inexplicable death. It reads as follows:

"Dear Rene: "I am heartsick. All my beautiful creations are as nothing out here. I have made too beautiful gowns for Madame who sees starring in zee new picture. 'For Whom the Zoots Toot,' and what you zeeek she wear to zee grand opening tonight? Zee new so

Families of the deceased, despite the climatic advantages here, have all expressed a desire to return to the east as soon as the insurance money is received. They will carry on their business. Court Ponders Decision in AP Antitrust Suit

Government Argues Trial Unnecessary, Seeks Directed Verdict.

NEW YORK, July 8.—(AP)—The Associated Press argued today for an open trial of the government's antitrust suit against it, declaring that to open its membership "to any newspaper wishing its service would destroy the foundation upon which the co-operative enterprise has been created."

Attorneys for the department of justice presented arguments to a three-judge federal district court that there were no uncontroverted facts and on that basis the issues should be decided in a summary judgment—verdict without trial—on documents alone. The court reserved decision after listening to the day of arguments.

The Associated Press countered that there were at least seven major facts it had challenged and the case was one for trial at which testimony could be presented.

Nazis Using New Tanks At Kursk, Radio Claims By The Associated Press. German military circles were quoted in a Transocean agency dispatch broadcast from Berlin today as saying that Nazi tanks of a new design and even heavier than the 80-ton Mark VI Tigers were being sent into the battle of Kursk.

"Details of these super Tigers are still treated as a military secret," said the broadcast, recorded by The Associated Press.

From RAF to 'Chutist—Now Wants Pilot Duties

CAMP WHEELER, Ga., July 8. (AP)—A former RAF sergeant pilot, who decided bombing raids on Germany's Ruhr Valley were too tame and volunteered as a U. S. Army paratrooper, now has applied for duty as a pilot in the Army Air Forces—because of a bad appendix.

Three years in the RAF, Private Frank C. Terry, 27, a native of Bridgeport, Conn., made at least 25 trips over Germany in British bombers after enlisting in 1939 in Canada.

He was decorated by King George VI for his service, but obtained leave to volunteer as a paratrooper. He returned to the United States last winter and was sent here for basic training before joining the paratroopers. But the appendix sent him to the hospital and finally kept him out of his first choice.

Terry was graduated from the University of Alabama.

Thousands of women are saying, "I never knew what an all-purpose flour really was until I tried White Lily. With White Lily in my kitchen I use less shortening and my biscuits are lighter and whiter. And I never knew I could make such tender and flaky crusts for my pies. For everything I want to bake, White Lily is perfect every time." White Lily is enriched with Vitamin B-1 and other food minerals. You, too, will prefer White Lily once you test it for all your baking. Look for Mrs. Dull's seal of approval.

CHICKEN PIE

This offers a practical solution to those chicken pie lovers who have often hesitated to serve this delicious dish because of time and effort involved in pastry making. Notice that the baking time is only 15 minutes... and, can't you think of other left-over meats which would benefit from this treatment.

Use freshly made or left-over chicken fricassee or chicken stew. Remove skin and bones from chicken pieces and mix with the gravy (if any). If you are using left-over chicken and are short of gravy, add medium white sauce sufficient to cover the pieces of chicken so that there will be plenty of gravy. If you like them, add one to two cups of cooked vegetables, such as mushrooms, green peas, asparagus tips or butter beans.

Four into a greased casserole and cover with triangles of buttered bread (crusts removed), fitting the triangles closely together. Bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes or until bread is browned.

Chamber Poll Reveals Traffic Great Problem

Steady Flow of Cars Downtown Urged by T. K. Glenn.

Automobile traffic is still one of Atlanta's major problems, according to first returns, released yesterday, of a Chamber of Commerce poll to determine the three greatest needs for the welfare and progress of the city.

One of the first to respond to a questionnaire mailed to representative Atlantans and Georgians was T. K. Glenn, chairman of the Trust Company of Georgia. "In my opinion," he wrote Carlyle Fraser, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, "the greatest need... is a free and uninterrupted flow of traffic through the downtown area. This covers a lot of things. 'Confusion Area.'"

"For instance, Peachtree at Cain and at Ellis street is the most confusing area that I know of. This could be very easily and inexpensively corrected."

"I suggest putting an underpass from Ivy to Spring street at each place; and, at other points in the city, similar improvements could be made at very little expense."

"When and if these things are done, the other improvements will follow." Elwyn W. Tomlinson, executive of the Capital Automobile Company, feels that the chief need is additional arteries of traffic with cut-offs so that the city may be bypassed by heavy trucks.

"Within 10 years after the war our autos and trucks will increase in number at least 40,000 to 50,000 over previous high," Tomlinson wrote.

"If we had a river in the city we would think very little of building three or four concrete bridges over it at a cost of six or seven million dollars."

Four-Lane Roads. "We should build four-lane roads and a complete four-lane road in a circle around Atlanta about six or seven miles in radius so that traffic could travel this road from one section of the city to another."

Although the poll primarily was for Atlanta, it included suggestions for the welfare and progress of the entire state.

Jack Williams, editor and publisher of the Waycross Journal-Herald, wrote an interesting letter, citing particularly the part aviation will play in the postwar period.

"Atlanta," he wrote, "should make plans now to greatly enlarge her aviation facilities with the view to more definitely establishing her supremacy in the air transportation of the country."

"After the war we will have thousands of skilled fliers, and in order to jump into air transportation it will not be necessary to build concrete highways."

He also suggested that Atlanta be developed as a wholesale center of the south.

VACATION AT HOME AND LIKE IT!

Public transportation systems—trains, buses, airplanes—are vital weapons of war.

Over 2,000,000 members of our armed forces are transported monthly. Unnecessary travel and pleasure travel should be "out" for the duration.

If necessary to travel, use a day train when possible.

Better still, enjoy the facilities of your own park, the "ole swimmin' hole," your Victory Garden and your own back yard!

Reading that "best seller" can be just as thrilling at home as in the mountains or on the beach, and, what could be more exciting for a city dweller than to get acquainted with the neighbors. You will find that little chap next door, the one who yells all night, is really a lovable little lad when building dream castles in his sandpile. Tune in on a "soap-box opera" each morning—they are not bad entertainment. Write those letters that should have been posted months ago, sip a cold, refreshing glass of lemonade, relax, live "The Life of Riley," enjoy a home vacation this year.
